

Our Childrens' Faces Tell Innocent Story of First Easter Day

In the faces of children on Easter Sunday morning we see reflected the soul of man and the satisfaction of Christ.

They may run hither after imaginary rabbits not fully understanding the ways of well organized Christian faith, but the innocence is there.

In O'Neill we see the youths as youths have reacted and will react for ages. Our children of the plains begin to understand the "greatest day for Christianity" slowly, perhaps, but no more slowly than we are slow to emphasize the "rolled stone" for the sake of the "properly rolled bonnet."

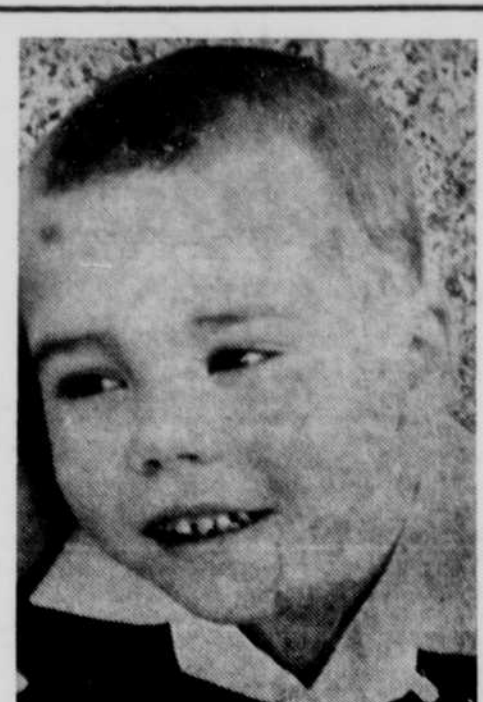

And we tell ourselves the rolled bonnets are not wrong and although we are right, we watch the reflected light of our childrens' faces and are happy again that Christ is risen. For this is the light of innocence which says as the angel said, "He has risen . . . He is not here."

World War I Vets To Organize Chapter In Atkinson Sunday

World War 1 Veterans will organize a local chapter in Atkinson Sunday afternoon at 2:30 instead of Monday as planned.

The meeting will be held in the American Legion Hall. All American veterans who served in the armed forces of the United States from April 6-17 to November 11-18 who hold honorable discharges are eligible for membership. The State Commander from Omaha will be present to organize the chapter according to Claude F. Humphrey, acting adjutant.

District Creation Ends Plan Stage

After rearranging the blocks in the proposed paving districts, the city council unanimously passed 11 ordinances creating the districts, last night.

If opposition of resident property owners in each district does not exceed 50 percent, a grand total of 39 blocks could be paved.

Several last minute changes in the placing of blocks in districts and the creation of the districts by ordinances numbering from 17 to 27 held up the proceedings but was not expected to delay the paving program substantially.

One block on Fremont from Seventh to Eighth Streets was stricken from paving plans by the council.

If all of the blocks are paved, a total of 80 streets will have been improved.

With the use of the map prepared by The Frontier (above) and the description (see other story) an up-to-the-minute understanding of council plans may be obtained.

The Frontier's New Job Press

The O'Neill Frontier installed a new, high speed, quality job printing press last week. The three-ton press was installed by W. Irl Todd, shop foreman, and Bob Kurtz, foreman for Consumers. The new press is capable of printing handbills, circulars and other material at the rate of 4,000 per hour with quality.

Frontier Offices Moved 'On Improvement List'

The offices of The Frontier were moved this week two floors south of the original building. The mechanical and production end of the newspaper will still be carried on in the original building. The offices of Jim Champion, co-publisher and Jerry Petsche, editor, as well as the front office will be in the new building.

The change was made necessary to make room for new equipment and more complete newspaper facilities.

Champion said the changeover as well as the installation of a new job press were two of a "considerable list of improvements" planned for The Frontier in the coming months.
