

Unique Use for Nail Polish

By BLANCHE SPANN PEASE, Homemaking Editor

One of these days some of our home gardeners with a triumphant look will be putting the first tomatoes on the table. Nothing is better than a home raised tomato, chilled and served sliced for table use.

If you are going to serve them in a tossed salad, cut them vertically instead of crosswise. Drain them a bit on a paper towel and they won't make the salad weepy. Incidentally, don't add them until the last minute, just before serving.

If you really want to get the most from tomatoes, eat them raw and fresh. But remember, they hold a lot of vitamins when cooked and canned and you'll likely want to put a lot of them up for use when there are no fresh ones.

We never bother to peel tomatoes at our house. We like them unpeeled, but if you belong to the finicky group, you can use these hints for peeling them. One way is to stroke the skin with the back of a knife until it is loosened. Another is to dip them in hot water for one or two minutes, then quickly into cold water. This is fine and the method I use when canning them.

SOUR CREAM SALAD DRESSING

One cup sour cream, 1/4 teaspoon salt, 1/2 cup water, one teaspoon onion juice, 1/2 cup vinegar, two tablespoons sugar, two minced hard-boiled eggs.

Mix the sour cream, sugar, salt, onion juice and minced eggs. Add vinegar and water. Stir thoroughly and pour over the salad.

These sour cream rolls are tender and delicious.

SOUR CREAM ROLLS

Two cups thick sour cream, one cake yeast, 1/4 teaspoon soda, two teaspoons salt, 1/2 cup sugar, four cups flour, melted butter.

Scald cream and cool to lukewarm. Crumble the yeast cake and stir into 1/3 of the lukewarm cream. Add soda, salt and sugar to the remaining cream and mix well. Combine the two mixtures and add flour gradually, stirring constantly until smooth. Brush with melted butter. Cover and put in a warm place and let rise to about 2 1/2 to three times the original volume. Knead lightly for about one minute and cut dough into two parts. Roll out one part at a time in rectangular shape about 1/4 inch thick. Brush with butter and cut in lengthwise strips about two inches wide. Place strips on top of each other and cut off pieces about 1 1/2 inches wide. Place pieces in small buttered muffin tins with the cut edges up. Let rise in a warm place until double in size. Bake in a hot oven of 425 F. 10 to 15 minutes, or until golden brown. Brush with butter, if desired. Yields 24 rolls.

Or you can run the tip of a fork into a tomato and rotate it over a flame until the skin wrinkles slightly.

I think that our farm wives, most of them, miss a good bet in that they seldom serve broiled tomato halves. You can broil these by brushing the tomato halves with salad dressing, sugar or butter and placing on the broiling rack after one side of the meat is broiled. Try it once and see if you don't like them for a change.

One of my friends tells me she keeps a bottle of transparent nail polish in her sewing box. When a new garment arrives at her home, she touches the center of the buttons with nail polish. This seals the threads so they won't unravel, and it is particularly helpful for men's shirts, she says. Who wants to be forever sewing on buttons?

That reminds me, too, of another friend of mine, a mother of small children, who sews the buttons on the children's clothes with dental floss. This is already waxed and it wears much longer than ordinary thread, she says.

'Mrs. V. F.' Passes Sour Cream Recipes

Dear Blanche:

I have found the sour cream recipes that have been passed along very good and nice to use. Since I also have some that are favorites, maybe some of the rest of your readers would like to try these.

We like an uncooked salad dressing made with sour cream.
