

U.S. Highway 281 Leaders Relected

Officers of the Nebraska unit of the U.S. Highway 281 association last Thursday were reelected in a meeting at Hastings. The Nebraska chapter is incorporated with headquarters at O'Neill.

The officers: Earl Carpenter of Red Cloud, president; C. L. Bishop of Bartlett, vice-president; John R. Krotter of Spencer, secretary-treasurer.

In resolutions, the association recommended that designation of 281 as the American Legion memorial be requested at the next legislature. This has already been done in Texas, Oklahoma, Kansas and North Dakota.

The association also urged that the center of the highway be re-surfaced and urged the state to complete hard-surfacing highway 281 across Nebraska.

The association also resolved to back the state and the city of Hastings in the widening of Hastings' Burlington avenue.

State Engineer L. N. Riss told the group that two million dollars would be spent on the highway in the 1953-54 biennium and another half million would be spent in the 1956-57 biennium.

Only 40 miles of 281 is not hard-surfaced. Current work includes four miles of hard-surfacing south of O'Neill and six north of here.

No Action on Relocation
The state highway commission took no action on pending road relocations when it met Monday in Lincoln for its monthly meeting.

State Engineer L. N. Riss said the commission will study LB 187, the highway reclassification bill, passed by the legislature, before announcing its decisions.

Five relocation matters are pending. They are U.S. 281, between Spencer and Ft. Randall; state 35 between Wakefield and Emerson; U.S. 30 at North Platte, and the South Omaha access road, LB 187, provides that the commission advise the highway department in writing of its position on any relocation matter. Final word rests with the governor, who has supervision over the department.

The commission was in session less than two hours Monday. Riss described the meeting as "routine."

Meanwhile, Riss, who has received a series of job offers, has declared he will stay in Nebraska.

O'Neillites Fare Well at Ainsworth

AINSWORTH—O'Neill golfers put in an excellent account of themselves here Sunday in the Ainsworth open golf tournament.

Ivan Kaiser, an O'Neill high school student, lost a heart-breaker in the title round in first flight play. The match with Jim Duesenberg of Ainsworth had gone to extra holes, a nip-and-tuck affair. Duesenberg finally sank an approach, from off the green and that was too much for the O'Neill kid.
