

Clown and Bull Fighter

Orval ("Stilwell Shorty") Mann was nicknamed for his small size and for his home town of Stilwell, Okla. He is well-known for his bull-fighting ability and his clowning routine with a little white mule. Stilwell is a veteran clown and bull-fighter and will keep the audience laughing with his comical antics.

Record Amount of Premium Money—

Premium money offered during the 1955 Nebraska state fair, September 3-9, will reach a record total of $66,662, according to the fair board secretary, Ed Schultz.

The 1955 prize money offering represents an increase of approximately $1,230 over the previous record figure which was set by the 1953 exposition.

"We have been steadily increasing the amount of premium money offered ever since 1946," said Schultz. "This year's record total includes an increase in cash awards in practically every department."

"The cash premiums offered are in addition to the ribbons, trophies and merchandise awards that are made in the various classes," Schultz pointed out.

Conservationists Meet Dec. 8-9—

The annual joint meeting of the Nebraska Reclamation association and the Nebraska State Irrigation association will be at Scottsbluff December 8 and 9.

For the past four years the associations have met together. The time and place for this year's meeting were selected by a joint committee which had Arthur C. Johnson of Kearney and William H. Hackman of Gering as co-chairmen.

Both groups have headquarters in Lincoln.

MANY MOTELS

There are 50,507 motels in the country. Filled to capacity, they could house more than the population of Vermont.

Farm Tips on Civil Defense—

Farmers, and rural populations, often ask: "What can I do to aid civil defense?"

The unlikelihood of rural areas receiving a bomb gives rise to the question.

Well, farmers and small towners can help. Here's a list of pertinent things to do composed by the civil defense office:

Take care of yourself. In each rural family one person should be trained in Red Cross first aid, and one in home nursing. Fire extinguishers and safety devices around the home should be checked regularly. The family should have some type of shelter for protection from the radioactive fallout which may result from atomic explosion miles away.

Stay in production. Farmers will be needed to feed America after an attack regardless of food stored around the nation. Whenever possible, an auxiliary power system should be installed on a farm—a generator or batteries—because an attack probably will destroy the regular sources of electricity.

Be prepared to market the farm's product. This is important even though the market is a refugee camp only a few miles away. Farmers, therefore, should take a close look at the highway system in the areas. Consideration should be given for extra gasoline storage on the farm, because an enemy attack could easily cut off gas supplies for transportation.

Be prepared to accept refugees from cities. The civil defense plan for evacuation of target cities automatically carries civil defense into the rural areas. Non-rural groups should be ready to feed and shelter evacuees temporarily.

Plan to help others. Plan to send support teams, such as first aid and rescue squads, into the cities after attack.

There is one vehicle for every 700 feet of every lane in both directions of all streets and highways in the United States.
