'Excess Leisure Cause Trouble'—Mrs. Noble

Commander Chace... asks each post to be a "shining light" in community service.—The Frontier Photo.

"The trouble with most people today is that they have too much time on their hands. As a result they are discontented, always looking for something new."

Mrs. Minnie Noble of 3995 Hillcrest ave., Los Angeles, Calif., widow of the late Seth Noble of O'Neill, has blue eyes and iron-gray hair and she speaks with authority, she believes, for she was 90-years-old on Thursday, September 1. She has watched America's rapid progress from the horse and buggy era to the present jet age.

"Living is easier today," she says, "and because it is, people have more free time. Leisure breeds discontent."

"Why, in my day, when I was young, we had so much to do that there wasn't time to become bored."

Mrs. Noble relaxed at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Bradford Trenham, 4301 Don Felipe drive, while she reminisced. A birthday party was held with relatives and friends gathering.

Mrs. Noble was born in Marble Rock, Ia., taught school in the late 1880's and in 1890 married her late husband, a lumberman.

The Nobles lived in Plankinton, S.D., before coming to O'Neill.

The Moore-Noble Lumber & Coal company here still carries the family name.

Mrs. Noble visited California in 1914 and has watched Los Angeles grow from a country town into a big city. Her formula for longevity is abstinence from liquor and tobacco and an early-to-bed, early-to-rise schedule.

In addition to her daughter, wife of Bradford Trenham, executive vice-president of the California Taxpayers' association, she has two grandchildren. They are Mrs. Shari Gillespie, 3877 Cherrywood st., and Navy Ensign Noble B. Trenham of Pensacola, Fla. There is also one great-grandchild, Lynn Gillespie, age 4.

Before leaving O'Neill several years ago, Mrs. Noble was presented a 50-year pin by Symphony chapter of the Order of the Eastern Star in ceremonies here.

She left O'Neill in an ambulance because of a foot ailment, went to California to be near her daughter, and made a dramatic recovery.

New Head of Hospital Asks Help

'Blood Bank Needing Members,' Asserts Mother M. Coronata

One of the first official acts of the new mother superior at St. Anthony's hospital was to issue an urgent appeal for volunteer blood donors.

Mother M. Coronata, who succeeds Mother M. Bertrand as head of the medical center here, points out the critical need for an expanded walking blood bank.

"No patient at St. Anthony's has ever suffered from want of blood," the new administrator pointed out. "However, there are instances in which the hospital is hard put to meet the requirements."

In one month recently 32 blood transfusions were made.

Members of the Knights of Columbus council have been serving as volunteer donors. "These and other people of the O'Neill region have been very generous," Mother Coronata explains. A healthy person may give blood every four months. Sometimes the already registered donors are not available for various reasons or are being called upon too frequently.

"We need volunteers badly," the mother asserted, "and we're asking anyone who will help to fill in a blank (appearing on page 9 of this issue) and mail it to us."

Mother Coronata is a native of Alliance. Her grandparents homesteaded there in 1893. She has been in the Sisters of St. Francis order for 23 years.

Mother Coronata attended Xavier college, Xavier, Kans., taught for eight years, interned at Mercy hospital at Denver, Colo., and since 1944 has been at St. Joseph's hospital at Minot, N.D., as a technician.

Concert Drive in Flying Start

An enthusiastic group of member-workers of the O'Neill Community Concerts association attended a banquet at the Knights of Columbus hall, Sunday, September 11, to launch the 1955-56 membership drive for this area.

P. E. Parkins, president of the local association, served as master of ceremonies for the dinner meeting and introduced the keynote speaker, the guest of honor, board members and campaign chairmen, Mrs. Melvin Ruzicka and John H. McCarville.

Attendance at the dinner session included workers from Stuart, Atkinson, Creighton, Butte, Ewing, Page, Neligh and Chambers.

Keynote speaker for the evening Mrs. Pauline Walston, midwestern representative for Community, said, "The desire to hear good music is increasing the world over. This is such an enthusiastic organization I am very optimistic about the campaign this year, and confident you will do a wonderful job and wish you the greatest success."

Miss Ruth M. O'Neill of New York City, guest of honor, was thrilled by her first trip to the Midwest.

"Only in America could a town this size present such fine artists to the local people. You are to be congratulated. I am so happy to be with you," commented Miss O'Neill.

Due to an extremely busy schedule in New York City as vice-president and treasurer of Columbia Artists, Inc., this was the first time Miss O'Neill had attended a kick-off dinner for Community Concerts.

Mr. McCarville introduced the captains and workers from the neighboring towns and expressed appreciation for their support.

"These concerts are possible only because of your memberships. O'Neill could not do the job alone and we are most happy that you have the opportunity to share this fine music with us," said Mr. McCarville.

Mrs. Ruzicka introduced the O'Neill captains and gratefully acknowledged their cooperation and effort. "I am sure we will have another successful drive and I wish you the best of luck," concluded Mrs. Ruzicka.

The dinner session concluded with a climatic community sing led by John McCarville in a tribute to Miss Ruth O'Neill and Nebraska's O'Neill.

All captains are requested to contact headquarters early in the week to check on the progress of the campaign. (Continued on page 4)

The Eagle creek country and the Niobrara river.

Reared in Philadelphia, Pa., she became secretary to the famous conductor, Leopold Stowkowski, when she was 18-years-old. She held the post four years, helped with the bookings of the famous Philadelphia Symphony orchestra, and subsequently helped found the concert booking firm which now is the ranking agency in the world.

Many big names in the concert field have been under personal management of Miss O'Neill and her associates. Among their current stars are Eleanor Steber, soprano, and Jasha Heifetz, violinist.

Miss O'Neill, who is world-traveled and internationally-known in the music field, "fell in love" with the community of the same name.

She said she became aware of the town about seven years ago when she spotted it on the map.

Upon her Monday departure, she had down-pat the story of the illustrious Gen. John C. O'Neill and the founding of this Irish colony.

"I shall return," she declared, "for I love this place!"

Dealer, 60, Dies in Well; No Inquest

Body of Merchant Is Found by Neighbors; 111 Several Years

Special to The Frontier SPENCER — A 60-year-old Spencer hardware and farm implement dealer, for whom authorities had been searching 24 hours, was found dead in a well on his farm about 4.30 p.m., Wednesday, September 14.

Herman Woidneck, a World War I veteran, had been ill for several years. Boyd County Sheriff Claude Collins and Boyd County Attorney William Brennan, who investigated, said there would be no inquest.

Woidneck disappeared Sunday morning about 11:30 o'clock. When he didn't return that evening his wife, Irma, thought he might have been visiting relatives in Holt county or a brother at Winner, S.D.

Mrs. Woidneck appealed Tuesday to authorities for help in locating her husband.

Leonard and Lawrence Filsinger, who live about six miles northeast of Spencer, noticed a car had been parked for an extended length of time not far from a corn field in which they were working. They went to investigate and found a neatly folded coat, glasses, hat and a note near the well.

They summoned authorities and the Spencer volunteer fire department was called to remove the body from the water at the bottom of the well.

The farm on which the well was located was one of four farms which Mr. Woidneck owned.

Survivors include: Widow—Irma; brothers—Henry and Paul of O'Neill, Reinhold of Winner, S.D.

Mr. Woidneck requested the Spencer American Legion post to conduct military rites at his funeral and that burial be in Spencer Union cemetery.

No funeral arrangements had been completed late Wednesday night.
