Dale Adams as president of the bank, and Dennis Walters as cashier were in charge, and incoming gifts were placed in the "vault". The honor guest occupied a special chair with others reserved for her mother and grandmother, also the mother and grandmother of the groom. An extremely clever program of readings, songs and pantomimes portrayed the romance of Ralph and Darlene from its beginning to old age, following which the "bankers" brought the gifts from the vault. Edythe Grimes and Mrs. Gordon Harley assisted in tabulating the many gifts presented to the bride. The two mothers presided at the serving table, and the lunch was in perfect keeping with the event.
