Penal Philosophy Not Malice

LINCOLN—The George Morris hearing and the ruckus following it were top subjects of discussion this week.

Morris was fired as head of the men's reformatory September 8 by the board of control. The board said that he made statements derogatory to the board and which hampered efficient operation of the penitentiary and men's reformatory.

The board also charged Morris failed to cooperate with penal director E. B. Albert.

The public hearing demanded by Morris was held last week. It lasted 3½ days.

Morris testified under oath that the statements he made were merely his penal philosophy and were not designed to cast reflection on Albert or the board.

He further testified that he could not have failed to cooperate with Albert since the penal director never visited the reformatory or even contacted him.

The former superintendent said his statements, to his knowledge, did not hurt operation of either institution.

However, Deputy Prison Warden John Greenholt testified for the state that statements made by Morris had caused a "mild disturbance" in a penitentiary cell block until a radio was turned off.

One of the witnesses for Morris was Reformatory Parole Officer Robert Farley. Frederick Wagener, Morris' council, said Anderson if he did not stop criticizing the governor he "would go the way of Morris."

This drew one of the sharpest statements made by the governor since he took office.

The governor said there was a "conspiracy" in the Morris hearing, which, evidently, is that of putting on a public show by those who would like to discredit my administration for personal gain—rather than to honestly discuss the issues between Mr. Morris and the board of control."

Anderson said he had talked to Farley and that the parole officer said he had made remarks and "that they were without foundation."

The governor said he told Farley he wanted to "work as a team" and that he had never made any threat to Farley regarding his job.

Whereupon, Wagener said the governor's statement was a "smoke screen, a red herring."

Said Wagener: "One can only conclude from his (Anderson's) outbursts of anguish that the developments of the Morris hearing have been extremely distasteful to the governor personally and placed his individual operation while governor in a very unfavorable light."

Wagener said further that the exchange showed "it is fast becoming apparent of the need for a grand jury to stop reckless statements."

The Lincoln attorney has denied that there was any political implications connected with his representation of Morris. And, added Wagener, "At the present time I have no plans to run for a state office."

Anderson defeated Wagener in the last republican primary election.

Also an issue in the hearing was a ruling by Referee Jack Devoe and concurred in by the board that cameras and microphones should be barred to assure no distraction of the witnesses.

However, photographs were taken secretly and the entire proceedings broadcast through use of a hidden microphone.

Highway Authority—Responsibilities of the advisory state highway commission will be increased when it holds its regular monthly meeting December 28.

The action was taken by Gov. Victor Anderson who outlined duties of the commission as he saw them. His action in effect, gave the commission the final say over the bulk of state highway construction questions.

The governor agreed to accept the commission's written advice on such matters as highway relocation and abandonments.

Further, the governor charged the commission with advising of the priority of improvements on the 415 miles added to the state highway systems this year.

In effect, the governor also said the commission could draw up future two-year highway construction programs.

Anderson said State Engineer L. N. Ress approved of the policy and commission members agreed to give the time necessary to carry out their increased responsibilities.

Meanwhile some state senators criticized the move on grounds it might possibly violate the constitution which says members of executive groups should live in Lincoln. Commission members, of which there are seven, come from various areas of the state.

The state highway department will continue to draw up its scientific ratings of which roads should receive construction priority.

And, at least four of the seven commission members must approve action of the commission in the fields outlined by the governor.

New Record Expected—Taxes on motor vehicle fuels are expected to set a new record in Nebraska this year.

That's the report from Clay Wright, chief of the state division of motor fuels.

Wright said $1,221,273 more has been collected through November of this year than for a corresponding period in 1954. He said tax collections so far total 29,731,815, compared with $28,753,480 last year.

The collections in 1954 were a record high but Wright said because of more vehicles and gasoline-burning tractors a new mark is expected to be reached again.

Farm Bureau's Yule Supper Tonight

EWING—The Christmas supper and meeting of the farm bureau will be held Thursday, December 15, at 6:30 o'clock in the Methodist church basement in Neligh. Members are to bring a basket supper and their own dishes. Also bring a 25-cent exchange gift.

Women chairmen of each unit are to furnish numbers for the program.

At the November meeting reports were heard of the annual farm bureau state convention. The reports were presented by delegates to the convention.
