'Twas The Week After Christmas

And all over the lot, Were dozens and dozens of cars to be bought. The Boss looked 'em over with a curl of his lip. And lashed the poor salesman with a long blacksnake whip. "You blankety-blanks," he said with a sneer. "Are they going to sit here the whole blasted year? You'd better get busy as sure as you're born. You'll eat these used cars come New Year's mornin'!" The salesman got up from their knees with a sigh, "We'll see that they sell, sir, or die in the try." So the boss drew his pencil and marked the cars down, To prices below any car lot in town. The salesman all know you don't need much cash, 'Cause we can finance you as quick as a flash. This week is the time, don't wait until fall, We'd like to make this a Happy New Year for all!
