Hydro Plant to Get Needed Repairs

River to Be Diverted During Project

Major repairs and improvements at the Spencer hydro electric plant, which will require construction of a diversion dam, are planned for early this summer.

Consumers will accept bids covering improvements to the spillway and tailrace and bids for rock replacement, stock piling and rock recovery until March 16, 1956. Plans, specifications and instructions to bidders are available at Columbus.

The four-month project will involve a great amount of work since it will be necessary to divert the river before needed places on the dike can be cleaned, backfilled and reinforced. In addition, river bed improvements below the spillway and tailrace call for the construction of four concrete walls.

Work on the Niobrara plant near Spencer probably won't start until June, when the water level is normally expected to be low enough for diversion.

The Spencer project will require approximately 2,300 cubic yards of excavation. Grouted-in rock and reinforced concrete will total about 1,240 cubic yards, and some 1,740 cubic yards of rock will be needed for the project.
