Lincoln Favored by Experts

By ROMAINE SAUNDERS, Retired, Former Editor The Frontier

LINCOLN-Lincoln is one of the country's favored communities visited by the experts that fly here and there to tell we plebians all about it. One such recently to talk in Lincoln comes from Southern California and bears the title of doctor, not an M.D. or Ph.D., but a "plant physiologist," if you know what that is.

The homesteaders south of the Elkhorn in the Dry creek flats knew nothing of "plant physiology," but they knew how to plant seed, cultivate the growing plants, gather the ripened fruitage and haul off wagon loads of fine potatoes such as only sandy loam can produce. The cow men beyond the Dry creek country never heard of price supports or meat eaters' conventions; they just looked after their herds and traded in the fall roundup of beeves for whatever the market afforded.

The gentleman from the Cal-Saunders ifornia center of such learning says climate has has more to do with taste of food products than do soil and water. Maybe that explains why a California-produced vegetable or fruit is a beauty to behold but tasteless as a stick of basswood.

If you want a good spud or tomato or melon, pluck it where it grows on sandy land in Holt county.

The message of scientific men traveling about has an appeal. How many of us hear the cries of hungry children in distant lands where famine and disaster have struck. Visit in distant lands of Africa. Hear the cry, "Hobus!" coming from starving children, from gaunt mothers and hungry fathers. Hobus-bread, food, something to eat. Or across in Asia, in sorrowing Korea, in flood and stormwrecked portions of the earth. The hungry and homeless and gownless! It is for the relief of such that my church leaders have appointed a day for all to bring their offering. I will do my part to pass a loaf to that little starving lass in famine-

Holt county's share of the $3,040,757 of state school funds is $57,457. Boyd county gets $20,-596; Wheeler county, $9,061; Garfield county, $11,226; Rock county, $35,118. The money comes from school land leases and liquor licenses.

Eighty years ago there was one telephone, the creation of a Yankee. Today there are 95 million telephones in use the world over. . . The Kansas judge who sentenced those four Iowa adventurers to 30 days in jail rfers to them as "badly spoiled little girls." . . The sandhills cowboy blew his top instead of bowing out gracefully for the for farm woman to step up with a fat hen for Vice-Presilent Nixon's plate at the GOP founders' day banquet. Yes, we are the Beef State, but we also raise chickens, for the most part the care and pride of prairieland sisters of the soil. . . Another course has been added in public schools - stuff the students with hog meat at the lunch hour. . . Turning to the back page of the first section of the Lincoln Sunday paper this morning, I met Editor Cal of The Frontier pictured along with a story of Savethe-Trains, of which Mr. Stewart has been an active promoter. O'Neill for years had six passenger trains daily. Those days north-Nebraskans got to Lincoln by train. Now they can not come to the capital city direct by train without going into

Another magninficent school building has recently been dedicated in southeast Lincoln. Clergymen, public officials and school teachers performed the rites of the dedication, while hundreds of fathers and mothers visited the wonders of this modern temple of learning which has 118,518 square feet of floor space and was built at a cost of $1,775,918.11, including equipment and the 37 acres of land comprising the grounds. It is a part of the school district carrying a six-million-dollar

The town of Tilden, half in Madison county and the other half in Antelope county, was first known as Burnett, which got on the map and invited public attention, when in 1884 the late Addison E. Sheldon started a paper there known as the Burnett Blade. There were newspapers everywhere in prairieland those days to get in on the land notices required to be published, $7 each, when a homesteader "proved up," that is, applied at the government land office at that time in Niobrara and later in O'Neill for a patent or government deed to his claim, Mr. Sheldon's Blade supported the republican candidate for president, James G. Blain, who was defeated by Grover Cleveland, the democratic candidate. In later years as secretary of the Nebraska State Historical society, Mr Sheldon was a Charley Bryan democrat. The Blade was a four-page, seven-column sheet, two pages "patent" and two pages the product of the editor and his printer. Publishers of weekly papers got $1.50 a year for their literary and news comments. Sheldon went to Dawes county in 1887 to become a prairieland homesteader and Josiah Coombs took over the Blade but moved to Boyd county to start a paper when that strip of the Sioux reservation was organized as a county.

Young Nebraskans to the number of 29,000 are interested in 4-H club work and to them "juvenile delinquency" has no appeal. How many know what the "H" stands for? I did't, so called the ag college. Here it is-H: Head, heart, hand, health. That covers human aspirations, but for what it has to do with the cattle industry on prairieland, ask the kids.

Prairieland is far removed from Mediterranean lands. Out of the vaulted blue above us sunbeams fall upon our fair and peaceful land. In sight of the restless waters of the Mediterranean or out upon the islands, Hebrews and Egyptian, Greek and Roman, Anthony and Cleopatra - scenes of slaughter throughout the centuries, of romance, and the pathway across its tossing billows of apostles of spiritual life and world conquerors. A churchman has now been banished from the sea's largest island. A beloved disciple of the Lord spent his last days in exile on a lonely island of the Mediterranean and wrote the sublime message that closes the story of redemption. Exile, banishment, the stake has awaited many of whom "the werld was not worthy." "For him who fain would teach the world, the world holds hate in feefor Socrates, the hemlock cup; for Christ, Geth-

Mrs. William Laviollet visited friends in Omaha.

Looking out of the window of youthful vigor down the highway ahead a writer sees it as a time of "weariness and monotony of advanced age." The golden glow of declining day, the calm of evening, the beauty of a prairie sunset are symbolic of "advaced age," which need not bring either weariness or monotony, but life's period of peace and rest after days and years of battling for an existence. The happiest guy I know of is in his 91st year and doesn't own a nickel's worth of property. Now, too, churchmen seek to unite all faiths. There will be no unity because this is an age when men and women think. States talk peace. No peace because all want it their way. Are you headed for the "weariness and monotony" of advanced age? You have seen life, you have memories-rejoice!

Profiting from Uncertainty

Those who make a business of guessing about politics owe much to Mr. Eisenhower. For a year | of pens and pencils in a single shirt pocket as exthey profited from the uncertainty as to whether | hibited regularly by Richard ("Dick") Perry, O'he would run again. After that was settled he | Neill postoffice clerk? . . Somebody suspended a seemed willing to play the guessing game with them about Mr. Nixon and the vice-presidency. But now he has dealt them a cruel blow: He will have nothing more to say on "that subject until after August."

At least once a week it had been possible for newsmen and columnists to concoct intricate interpretations of press conference remarks. They would unreel finespun theories that the white house wanted to test opposition to the vice-president-or that the republicans were faking uncertainty to deprive the democrats of a single, fixed

Now the political prophets are interpreting the president's latest statement - that he would be "happy to be on any political ticket" with Mr. Nixon—as handing the nomination to the Californian. But already it is being pointed out that Mr. Eisenhower did not say, "I want Dick Nixon for vicepresident." The guessers are not easily stopped. Next week they may avoid any mention of the vice-president and merely ask, "Mr. President, would you be happy to be on any political ticket with Governor Herter-or Former Governor Dewey-or Secretary Humphrey?"

Can he say anything but "yes" and open it all

To be sure the vice-presidency has assumed new importance in recent months, largely due to the ability of Dick Nixon. Much more attention has been given the office. Time was when the vice-presidential candidate simply went along for the ride. Not so now that Nixon has so greatly enhanced the prestige of the post.

Now We Need Something Else

Many, many farmers have come to agree with the Benson statement that if rigid price supports were the answer to the farm problem there would be no farm problem now.

Rigid price supports were just the thing when they were first devised and for the purpose for which they were applied, to encourage high production in war time when the desire was for every bushel that every available acre would produce. Our trouble was that we clung to it too long after the emergency was over. The people for whom we raised that food now howl to high heaven if we even speak of giving it to their people. They have their economics to think about.

So let's forget the political aspect and real statesmen of both parties get together on a farm bill that will really put the farmer on a firm
