

Salk Supply Brightens

LINCOLN—Nebraska can't spend all the federal money it is to receive for purchasing Salk polio vaccine for persons who can't pay for shots.

That's the report from Allen Rouse, director of the polio division in the state department of health.

Rouse said Nebraska was allocated $245,000 originally to buy vaccine for all residents, up to February 15. Then the method of getting vaccine to doctors was changed.

Previously, the state handled all the vaccine, parceling it to doctors. Now, 90 percent of the vaccine goes through commercial drug houses, and 10 percent through the department.

The state has $168,000 of the federal money left and is to get about $225,000 more.

The unused money, Rouse said, will revert to the federal government. He said the amount that goes to a state is not affected by the method of distribution. The state will get the same amount now that it got before.

Salk vaccine is now going through commercial channels and Rouse said the outlook is brighter than at any time in the past.

At least 46,800 doses of the vaccine will be received or are earmarked for Nebraska this month. Rouse said that is by far the largest amount ever reached.

"The predictions there would be quite a lot more vaccine available in March and April apparently will hold true," he said.

School Lands—

There are about 412,745 acres of school land under oil and gas leases.

Robert Hiatt, secretary of the board of educational lands and funds, which administers school lands, said the leases are bringing in rental of $358,964 per year.

This averages out at about 87 cents per acre, Hiatt said.

Hiatt said at last count there were 51 producing wells on state-owned land, bringing royalties to Nebraska of about $36,000 per month.

Judges Retirement—

The long-awaited ruling by state supreme court on the judges' retirement act passed by the last legislature caused considerable comment.

The high court held the law, requiring judges to retire at the age of 70, was constitutional.

But, it said the law does not become effective until January 3, 1957. It did not become law last September 18, the court said.

On the theory that the act became effective last September, along with other laws passed by the legislature, district court clerks began collecting a $1 fee on each civil case as the state's contribution to the judges' retirement fund.

Those collections at the time of the option amounted to $2,564.

In addition, judges themselves have paid in $5,844, or four percent of their earnings.

Intensely interested in the case were nine district judges, seven of whom had filed for reelection, and two who had not. The latter ones, James Fitzgerald of Omaha and Frank Munday of Red Cloud, had intended not to file for re-election because they thought the law was effective.

Now, however, they will seek re-election. The other seven judges, all of whom are 70 or will be after the first of the year, can run for re-election under the supreme court ruling.

The question of what to do with the money already collected will probably be decided by the attorney-general's office. Primarily the matter to be solved is if the money can be refunded, or if it will require an act of the legislature.

New Face—

A new face has joined the top levels of the republican party in Nebraska.

It is in the person of T. H. Maenner of Omaha. He is the new GOP national committeeman for Nebraska. He will be the connecting link between the state and national republican party organizations.

Maenner replaces Abel V. Shotwell of Omaha, who is retiring after 12 years. Mrs. Edna Basten Donald of Grand Island is continuing as GOP national committeewoman.

Both were elected at last week's founders day rally in Lincoln.

Quarantine Order Requires Form

The Wyoming quarantine order, which stated that all hay, straw, or fodder being shipped into Wyoming must be inspected and found to be free of the noxious weeds listed before being shipped, also required that an inspection form accompany the bill of lading.

The amendment of the quarantine order lifts the necessity of inspection before shipping and the need of sending an inspection certificate along with the bill of lading. In other words, you are now free to ship hay into Wyoming as before the quarantine order. Wyoming will, however, inspect hay which arrives in the state as far as mature noxious weed seeds are concerned.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Lorenz spent the weekend in Sioux City visiting her sister, Mrs. Orville White. They attended the Shrine circus Saturday evening.
