Whooping Crane Conservation Aid Is Being Sought

The public is asked to help protect the nearly extinct whooping crane which years ago was prevalent in North America. People living along the migration route of the cranes in central Texas, Oklahoma, Kansas, Nebraska, the Dakotas and the prairie provinces of Canada should learn to identify this bird and protect it from hunters.

The whooping crane is the tallest of all North American birds—standing more than five feet in height. It should not be confused with white birds of the heron family like the American egret, which is much smaller. The herons are sometimes called cranes but this is incorrect. The cranes are larger, heavier birds than the herons and have different habits. The whooper is not only tall, but heavily built, with a long neck and a long, sharp beak. The body plumage is white with jet black wing tips. The crown is bare and quite red and there is a long black mustache across each cheek. The voice of the whooper is also different with loud, clear bugle-like notes.

Usually a pair of whooping cranes rear only one youngster each year. Undoubtedly some of the younger ones are shot along with adult birds in their dangerous journey from Texas and Canada.

The public can do its part by spreading the word that these rare and interesting birds must be spared if they are not to become extinct.

Cross-Purposes

This political element led some to predict a stormy session. In announcing that he was calling the special session, Crosby said he was glad the taxation committee liked "my program." This brought some private grumbling by legislators that whatever was passed would be their program and not Crosby's. But indications were that most of the Crosby proposals would be on the agenda.

There seemed general agreement between Crosby and the committee that there should be constitutional amendments for these proposals.

To allow the legislature to provide for the appointment of county assessors instead of their election as at present.

To allow exemption of household goods from taxation.

To change the makeup of the state board of equalization, which is now composed of elected state officials.

But the committee said it had not considered a fourth Crosby proposal—a partial exemption of homesteads—and had its doubts about a fifth—knocking out the clause in the constitution which makes "uniform assessments" mandatory.

The governor has made a sixth proposal. This would place a limitation in the constitution so that if the legislature ever passed a sales or income tax it would first have to be used to replace levying of that part of the property tax which supports state government.

Several senators in statements to the press said they had different proposals to make. All of this indicated that the special session wouldn't be a "tea party."

Governor's Restrictions—Crosby, in announcing he would call a special session, said he would restrict it to proposals

Special Session Gets Spotlight

By MELVIN PAUL

LINCOLN—All attention was focused this week on the coming special session of the legislature and what it might do to un-ansar the tax tangle.

The "burden of proof" was on the legislature to do something concrete about the tax problem now that Gov. Robert Crosby reluctantly called the senators back for an April 20 extra session.

The governor bowed to a strong demand for such a session by the legislative council committee on taxation. His decision came within five hours after the committee released the text of its resolution to the public.

Members of the nine man committee in two closed sessions with Crosby had urged him to call such a session.

They agreed with him that if tax reform is to come, it will take some constitutional amendments to knock out certain restrictions. But they told him they didn't like his announced campaign to get these amendments on the ballot through an initiative petition effort.

One reason was that they feared that such a petition effort might get mixed up with politics if Crosby decided to run again. This might defeat the effort to get anything done about tax reform.

But observers felt that another reason was that if there is to be any credit gained for helping solve the tax question the legislators wanted in on it. After all, they are running for election in August and some are on the gridlock about the "do nothings."

Some legislators, at least, didn't want Crosby to get all the political glory.

Safety 'War' Cost—Meanwhile, the safety patrol added airplane spotters and radar to its arsenal of weapons designed to slow down drivers on the highway and cut the death toll. These steps are being taken in addition to relieving the safety patrol of extra duties so patrolmen can spend more time on the highways.

Although no one could tell for sure, there seemed some indications that the steep increase in highway deaths of the first months of the year now might be leveling off.

It developed this week that the safety war will cause a "loss" of $480,000 in state highway department money which had been earmarked for road improvement. That's because it will take $240,000 in salaries for the 62 men who will man the state weighing stations and conduct driver's license examinations, relieving the safety patrol of these duties.

Not only is the $240,000 lost but another $240,000 in the federal matching money which might have been obtained goes out the window.

Added to the $120,000 in increased salaries for maintenance employees, plus a similar amount in federal money, it can be seen that about $800,000 in road improvement will be lost, all told.

State Engineer L. N. Riss said that the Department will be able to complete all the projects it had planned in the current two year program. But the "lost" $800,000 will cut into the proposed program of improving certain gravel roads by giving them a bituminous surface.

Extra-Curricular Activities—Are Nebraska schools giving too many extra-curricular activities to their students? State Supt. F. B. Decker thinks maybe some schools do. Anywhere he is calling a conference on April 26 to talk over the problem.

Much of the trouble comes in small high schools, Decker said. The same youngsters will participate in a great many activities, including athletics, music, debating, one-act plays, etc. Each of these is fine but when one youngster gets into too many it may be bad, Decker said.

Jehovah Witnesses Parley at Lincoln—Delegates and interested persons from O'Neill, Stuart, Schuyler, Norfolk, North Platte, Gothenburg, Lexington, Kearney, Hastings, Grand Island, Polk, York, Crete, Omaha, Blair, Nebraska City, Fremont and Lincoln attended a convention of Jehovah's Witnesses in Lincoln April 2, 3 and 4. The delegates were ministers, all having been trained in schools sponsored by the Watchtower Bible and Tract society, the legal agency of Jehovah Witnesses.

The purpose of the assembly was to further instruct the delegates in Bible teaching and also to give counsel on ways and means of carrying on the ministry. The feature speaker was C. W. Rieger of New York City.

In his keynote address, Mr. Rieger spoke on the subject "God's Loving Way." Mr. Rieger cited "material and spiritual benefits that demonstrate the Creator's love for obedient mankind." He encouraged the attending ministers to copy God's loving way by doing good to their fellow man in a spiritual way.
