

Hubby's Fish Makes Good Dish

By BLANCHE SPANN PEASE

Well, what shall we have to eat today? Has the man in your life been catching any fish lately? This is fishing season, you know. If it so happens that he's caught a good sized fish and you have it stashed away in the refrigerator or freezer, maybe you'd like to try a baked stuffed fish for a change. Particularly if the men at your house are good fishermen and you need to vary the fish menu a little.

BAKED STUFFED FISH
Three or four pound dressed fish, 1 1/2 teaspoons salt, bread stuffing made with one quart crumbs, four tablespoons melted fat, three slices bacon (if desired).

Wash and dry the fish. Sprinkle inside and out with salt. Fill body cavity of fish loosely with stuffing. Sew the opening with needle and cord or close with skewers. Place fish in greased pan; brush with fat. Lay bacon over top. Bake at 350 F. (moderate oven) 40 to 60 minutes. Serves six to eight.

Serve this with tartar sauce, escalloped potatoes and peas and celery, tossed green salad and some sort of dessert. Maybe a king could ask for more, but you couldn't!

Or for variety, you can bake the fish without stuffing and serve with tomato sauce and mashed potatoes.

Horses, Not Tractors, Can Be Loved.

Mrs. LeRoy Holcomb of Chambers wins our three-months' subscription today.

Chambers, Nebr.
Dear Mrs. Pease:
Spring has arrived again, bringing the busy hum of tractors in the fields. How seldom is a team of stout horses seen? The tractors have taken the place of horses in the fields but they can never replace the horse in the sentiment of a true horseman.

The iron horse may do the work in a more efficient manner and more quickly but who can love a tractor?

My father is one of those rare persons who loves a horse. Great was his joy a few weeks ago when Maggie had a little colt. A baby colt is unusual enough these days but the amazing part was that Maggie is 19-years-old! And there is a story back of it all.

In 1889, Grandfather Whitaker came to Buffalo county from Indiana. He brought his personal belongings on an emigrant car, and included in that car was a team of horses. After a few years, grandfather's family included two tow-headed boys. Looking ahead, grandfather realized that soon more horses would be needed so that his sons could also work in the fields.

From his original team, colts were raised that for years did all of the field work on that farm. But they did more than that for they won a place in my father's heart that no tractor can replace.

When father married, one of these young teams was his. As a child, I remember Phyllis and Lydia. I rode in from the fields sitting high on their necks and clinging tightly to the hames.

Then came that terrible winter when father lay in bed week after week with rheumatism. Phyllis and Lydia went back to grandfather for a time. The one day we children went to see them and, to our surprise, the two long-legged black colts that frisked at their sides. And so Gyp and Bess came into our lives.

The years went on. I was in high school when Gyp's and Bess's daughters, Daisy and Nellie, pulled the wagons that brought our furniture and machinery from Buffalo county to Holt county. It was a week's journey but they came mile by mile to the farm that was their last home. Then Nellie died of swamp fever, leaving Daisy the only survivor of the Indiana team of 1889. But Daisy soon had a black colt, Maggie. And now at the old age of 19 years Maggie has her first colt. And so the line goes on! No wonder there was joy in my father's heart as he saw that awkward, long-legged baby with its mother.

Oh yes, he has tractors, in fact, two of them, but Maggie's colt is a bit of his forefathers—she is part of what grandfather brought from Indiana away back in 1889. Father works the tractors but he loves the horses.
