Budget Requirements for Holt Increased

Salary Increases, Two Elections Factors

The Holt county general fund budget requirements are up for the new fiscal year, according to an estimate filed this week with the board of supervisors.

The increase largely is due to the costs of two elections—primary and general—and an increase in county employees' salaries during the second half of the fiscal year, which begins January 1, 1955.

County fair requirements are up $700. The amount to be raised by tax levy for fair work will be increased $300.

County medical and hospitalization requirements are down an estimated $3,000. The amount to raise by taxation this year will be $7,000.

The proposed tax levy as shown in the statement of the budget for the year 1954-55 is up over the 1953 levy due to a 20 percent cut in valuation of all village and city real estate and a 30 percent cut in all rural real estate, made by the county board of equalization.

DELOIT—Florence Van Ostrand was a patient at the Neligh hospital last week.

EWING—H. C. Schaffer, 82, of Onawa, Ia., died at the Onawa hospital Tuesday, July 13.

Mr. Schaffer was a pioneer of this section of the country. He was born in Shelby county, Ia. His entire life had been spent in Iowa with the exception of a few years spent in Kansas.

Mr. Schaffer had made the acquaintance of several persons in Ewing while visiting the home of his daughter and son-in-law.

Survivors include: Widow; sons—Cyril E. of Billings, Mont., Merle L. of Turin, Theodore H. of Mapleton, Ia., Orlo M. of Moorhead, Ia., and Loyd C. of Onawa; daughter—Mrs. Harris of Ewing.

Mr. and Mrs. Harris left last Thursday morning for Onawa where they attended the funeral on Friday, July 16. They remained for a few days' visit.

Mr. and Mrs. Hartly to Visit Son—Mrs. P. B. Hartly left today (Thursday) to visit in Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., for about 10 days with her son, A/Lc Thomas C. Hartly, who is stationed at Kinross air force base.

She is accompanying Mr. and Mrs. Edward Campbell as far as Green Bay, Wis., where they plan to visit their son, Edward. The Campbells will vacation in Monocqua.

Champ Long - Distance Commuter

Salary Increases, Two Elections Factors

He got to Washington by hog train and bus. The hog train, on which he worked his way as a nursemaid to the hogs, took six days to reach Buffalo, N.Y. He had $150 when he took the bus on to Washington. This was the fall of 1922.

"I've had a lot of good breaks in my life for which I'm thankful to God," he said. "One of the first came a month or so after I got to Washington."

Bill Froelich came up the hard way. He was born in Stromsburg, the son of a farmer. His father's roots were in Germany, his mother's in Ireland.

He was born in Stromsburg, the son of a farmer. His father's roots were in Germany, his mother's in Ireland. They met as neighbors in Illinois.

There were three children in the family, Bill, Frank and the sister who is now Mrs. Edward T. Campbell. All live in O'Neill.

Frank, eight years older than Bill, runs two of their Nebraska farms. Mrs. Campbell's husband is cashier of the O'Neill First National bank.

The Froelich family moved to near Inman, east of O'Neill, when Bill was an infant. His dad bought and sold livestock.

When Bill was four they moved to O'Neill and the elder Mr. Froelich joined J. B. Ryan in the day and grain business.

His roommate was another O'Neill young man, John Mullen, also a Georgetown student.

During Bill's second year there, Senator Norris named him as clerk of the senate agriculture committee of which the senator was chairman.

This paid two hundred dollars monthly. He stayed on during the remainder of his study at Georgetown.

The committee work entailed briefing bills for the senators, but gave him more time to study than had the postoffice work. He finished among the top three in a class of 125 to 150. Senator Norris encouraged him to prepare for the Nebraska bar exam rather than stay in the East.

He finished school in June, 1926, took his examination for the Nebraska bar in July, was named assistant United States district attorney in Omaha July 15.

J. C. Kinsler was the United States attorney for Nebraska. The assistant's monthly salary was $161, but Bill felt it was sufficient to support a wife.

A week after taking the position he and the hometown girl of his dreams were married. They set up housekeeping in Omaha.

Those were the prohibition days. It fell to the lot of the young attorney to specialize in the prosecution of liquor and narcotic cases.

Here his talent for digging up evidence and for thoroughness soon brought attention.

The record shows he was a fearless fighter. He handled dozens of cases, lost only a few.

When Mabel Walker Willebrandt, then assistant attorney general at Washington in charge of penal institutions, liquor and tax cases, needed an assistant in her department, she thought of the young man at Omaha.

After two years in Omaha, he became one of a famous "secret six" assigned by Mrs. Willebrandt to prominent cases throughout the nation.

He joined the attorney general's staff in Washington in April, 1929.

Among others, Mr. Froelich was assigned to liquor conspiracy cases against Helen Morgan and Texas Guinan, famous night club personalities.

He also handled the re-indictment of ex-Gov. Sidney J. Catts, sr., of Florida.

The original indictment against the former governor for aiding in the manufacture of counterfeit money had been found to be faulty.

Mr. Froelich brought a re-indictment, but at the trial the jury disagreed and the ex-governor went free.

Mr. Froelich remembers as "a most interesting case" one at Seattle, Wash. A federal prohibition administrator for three states and 18 prohibition agents were named in a conspiracy to run liquor in from Canada by boat.

"They had a radio hookup. Bedtime stories were the signals for the rum runners to take either the inland route or the outside route, depending on where the coast guard was," he said.

In Seattle, Mr. Froelich got a phone call to report to the attorney general in Washington for an appointment with President Hoover.

Capone was given a 11-year sentence, but didn't finish it. He became a mental case and died outside of prison.

Next Mr. Froelich decided to switch directions. He resigned his work with the Justice Department. Mr. Green, who had been appointed to the United States Attorney's post in Chicago, named him as his assistant.

During a year's tenure in this position, he presented evidence in the Government's fraud case against the Insull investment houses.

Friendship with Walter J. Cummings, who is now chairman of the Continental Illinois National bank and Trust Company of Chicago, led to Mr. Froelich's return to Washington in a new role.

Mr. Cummings was then an associate of Will H. Woodin of the American Car and Foundry Company, New York. President Franklin D. Roosevelt appointed Mr. Woodin Secretary of the Treasury and Mr. Cummings became the Secretary's right hand man in Washington. In turn, Mr. Cummings asked Mr. Froelich to become his counsel in the department.

The Nebraska resigned his Chicago position to go the Capitol once more. Secretary Woodin's health was not good and Mr. Cummings was the acting secretary much of the time.

As chairman of the Milwaukee's board of directors, Mr. Froelich assisted in setting up the FDIC.

When Mr. Cummings resigned to become chairman of the Chicago bank, Mr. Froelich also ended his Washington career.

He set up private law practice, with offices in the same Chicago bank building, 231 South La Salle street. This was in 1933.

For some 2 1/2 years, the Froelichs, who now had two children, lived in Chicago, then decided to establish their home at O'Neill. They built it on the north side of town on a block-square site.

Mr. Froelich began his commuting via the Milwaukee road.

His first association with the Milwaukee came through Leo T. Crowley, who succeeded Mr. Cummings as FDIC chairman.

As chairman of the Milwaukee's board of directors, Mr. Froelich named Mr. Froelich as his legal assistant.

His present position as member of the Milwaukee's Board of directors and of the executive and finance committees calls for considerable traveling.

Included in his other directorships are those in the Wisconsin Public Service Corporation of Milwaukee (electric utilities), of which he is also general counsel; City Products corporation of Chicago (storage car icing and breweries with business in 36 of the 48 states); Bendix Westinghouse Airbrake of Cleveland; American Brewery corporation of New Orleans, La. He is chairman of the board for the New Orleans firm.

He is also director of the First National bank of O'Neill and of the First National bank at Atkinson.

The law firm he heads has as partners Jacob Grossman, Alfred B. Teton and Seymour Tabin.

Next fall another Bill Froelich will enter law college at Georgetown. Bill, jr., 26, is the eldest of the three sons and two daughters.

Like his dad, Bill, jr., started off in another direction. Frail health ended his four-year studies at St. Louis, Mo., to become a Jesuit priest. He is in the navy, stationed at Washington, after recovering his health on the Froelich ranch.

Nancy 22, is Mrs. J.R. Berigan, wife of an air force lieutenant at Scott Field, Ill., Mary 16; James, 14, and Charles 11, all attend St. Mary's academy at O'Neill.

Mr. Froelich is a daily communicant in the Catholic church and will interrupt a business trip to go to a church and pray.

"If I had my life to live over I would change one thing, I would get closer to God earlier in life."

Polio Shots Being Made Available

Gamma globulin shots were made available to all persons in Broken Bow and its trade area beginning Tuesday morning, Dr. Ted Koefoot, jr., city physician, said.

His announcement followed reports of eight new polio cases in Broken Bow over the weekend. The eight raises to 10 the number reported in Broken Bow this summer.

Dr. Koefoot said the gamma globulin inoculations would be available to all desiring them. Last month, after an outbreak of polio cases in the nearby community of Ansley, mass inoculations of gamma globulin were ordered.

The new cases in the Custer county city are: John Turner, 7, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Turner.

Alan Portschke, 5, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jay Portschke. Dickie McBride, 6, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. McBride.

Teddy Connelly, 12, son of Mr. and Mrs. Tom Connelly. Billy Cash, 12, son of Mrs. Charlotte Cash.

Ardythe Bunner, 4, and Kelly Bunner, 2, children of Mr. and Mrs. Farris Bunner. Mrs. Ralph Meston.

Leaving Today—Mr. and Mrs. Edward T. Campbell will leave today (Thursday) for Green Bay, Wis., where they will visit their son, Edward T. Campbell, jr., for several weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. P. B. Hartly accompanied them to Green Bay. She will be met there by her son, Tom, and continue to Sault Ste. Marie, where he is stationed with the air force.

GROUND IS HOT CELIA—Mrs. Charlotte Keidel, who resides north of Stuart, decided to find out for herself just how hot the ground can get under a broiling sun.

She stuck a candy thermometer into the ground on Monday, July 12, and came up with a reading of 137 degrees.

'Honest Differences' with Ike Foreseen

The 16-year congressional veteran left O'Neill and drove to Albion where he spoke briefly at a meeting of the Northeast Nebraska District Press association, attended by 130 newspaper editors, publishers and employees.

Curtis is married and the father of two adopted children. He practiced law at Minden prior to entering the congressional field in 1939.

Said Mr. Ray in behalf of Congressman Curtis: "Carl T. Curtis has a 16-year record of devoted service to our state, to every citizen, and to our nation. He knows the job. He knows the senators. No newcomer could ever hope to have the initial effectiveness which he possesses. Carl T. Curtis can render a greater service than anyone else available."

The previous day, at Valentine, Curtis reiterated he stands firmly against consigning American troops to Indochina.
