Native Grass Harvest at Hand

The harvest season for native grass seed is at hand. Where blue-stem, Indian grass, switchgrass or gramma grass is available in fairly heavy stands and well seeded, it is a crop well worth harvesting.

Informed sources predict that grass seed will be scarce for next spring's seeding needs and the price will be high. Two reasons are given for this view. One is the decreased harvest possibilities in the drought area to the south and the increased demand due to the cross compliance on acreage allotments.

Rural Youth Camp in West Virginia

The national rural youth camp will be held from September 30 through October 3 in Jacksonville, W.V. Those planning to go should make their plans early.
