Tiny School Counts 3 Sets of Twins

The teacher in Holt county rural school district 241, located seven miles east of O'Neill and one mile south, counts three sets of twins in her classroom this term. To have multiple sets of twins is unusual, but in this case they are all brothers—from the Floyd Black family. Mrs. Mae DeLong is the teacher in what is known as the Emmitt Thompson district. "They're not identical twins," Mrs. DeLong explains, "and none of us have any difficulty in distinguishing them." Mr. and Mrs. Black reside on the Art Ruodee turkey ranch, having moved to the country from Ewing. The school-age population in the district having been swollen by the arrival of the Black family, the officials decided to reopen the tiny school house this year. There are six other pupils in school besides the twins.
