

Anticipates Winter's Arrival

By BLANCHE PEASE

Do you want to make some kraut? Here is how the department of agriculture suggests you make it:

Use 10 pounds of cabbage to 1/4 pound salt. Remove all damaged or dirty leaves. Quarter the heads and shred finely. Pack in a clean leg or earthenware crock. Small containers are recommended for household use. Sprinkle a little salt in the container, put in a layer of three or four inches of shredded cabbage, then pack down with a wooden utensil such as a potato masher. Repeat with salt, cabbage, and packing until the cabbage is all used. Press the cabbage down as tightly as possible. Cover with a cloth and a glazed plate. Use flint or granite. Skim off the film or scum which forms when the fermentation starts. When bubbles cease to rise, sauerkraut may be jarred as follows: Place in cans, make a partial seal, process for 30 minutes in a boiling water bath, remove and seal tightly.

Keep the shredded cabbage under the brine while it is being fermented. Remove the scum daily and keep the cloth clean. The best temperature for curing is between 75 and 85 F. so don't put it where it will be too cool. It requires from 10 days to three weeks. When bubbles cease to rise, the fermentation is complete. To seal sauerkraut, pour a layer of hot paraffin over the surface. When the paraffin seal is broken the kraut should be used in a short time or canned as described above.

You can "kraut" turnips if you want to. Here is how it is done: Use 5 1/3 ounces of salt to each 10 pounds of turnips. Fall varieties of turnips make better sauerkraut than spring ones. Medium sized turnips used as soon as possible after they are pulled give a good product.

Wash the turnips and rinse them in cold water; do not scrub them. Remove all the green part from the top. Do not peel. Then shred as for cabbage sauerkraut. Do not slice.

Shred five pounds of turnips. Sprinkle them with three scant tablespoons or 2 2/3 ounces of salt. Shred another five pounds of turnips, add three scant tablespoons of salt. Cover with a cloth and plate. Handle as described for fermenting kraut above.

If you still have tomatoes and have apples, you may want to wind up the canning season by making this governor's sauce, which is fine for serving with either hot or cold meats.

GOVERNOR'S SAUCE

Twelve medium ripe tomatoes (unpeeled), 12 medium tart apples (unpeeled), nine large onions (peeled), three large green peppers (seeds and stems removed).

Force above ingredients through food chopper, using medium blade. Place in kettle and add: Three cups sugar, three tablespoons salt, three cups cider vinegar, one teaspoon dry mustard, one teaspoon cinnamon, one teaspoon cloves, one teaspoon black pepper.

Mix ingredients and cook slowly until thick or about 1 1/2 hours, stirring frequently while cooking. Delicious served with either hot or cold meats.

Redbird Reader Wins Subscription—Dear Mrs. Pease: I do believe I'm anxious for winter to arrive this year. The summer has gone fast but I've been "tired to my bones" and am longing to get myself built-up and feel more energetic.

I had an operation last spring and I have three little folk. I do my housework rather skimpily so that I can can a little. I have not done much this summer compared to other summers because it has been hard to keep up.

We don't have water in the house and I used to carry all that but my husband has taken that going to have water piped to the house this fall—which is what I have longed for. He also takes care of the hens for me, too. I have an electric combination range which I appreciate so much. I don't have to carry fuel for it. We use the coal and wood part of the combination for the winter time to heat the kitchen.

I've been canning beans and making pickles. Haven't had enough tomatoes to can. While my husband was having at his folks, I canned corn.

I have an ironing waiting so must say goodbye. REDBIRD "FRONTIER WOMAN" READER

3 Senate Candidates on GOP Caravan

O'Neill Visit Set for October 15

The republican caravan, featuring the 1954 republican candidates for all offices, will stop in O'Neill on Friday, October 15. The caravan will arrive at 11:45 a.m., and hold a street meeting. Short talks will be given by: Senatorial candidates—Carl T. Curtis, Roman L. Hruska and Mrs. George P. Abel; gubernatorial candidates—Victor E. Anderson; congressman—H. L. Miller. Other candidates will be introduced. After brief speechmaking, there will be time for the candidates to visit with their friends.

W. W. Spear, republican state chairman, announced that everybody in Holt county is invited and urged to attend this street meeting and visit with the candidates. "This year," Spear said, "the caravan has an unusual feature in that it presents three candidates for united States senator, none of whom has ever been on a statewide ballot before. These candidates are particularly anxious to meet the people in every part of the state."

The candidates who will be present on the republican state caravan are as follows: Senate candidates—Carl T. Curtis, Roman L. Hruska and Mrs. George P. Abel; gubernatorial candidate—Victor E. Anderson, Lt.-Gov. Charles Warner, Secretary of State Frank Marsh, State Auditor Ray C. Johnson, Atty.-Gen. C. S. Beck, Railway Commissioner Richard Larson and Ralph Hill, candidate for state treasurer.

The idea of a republican caravan was first originated in 1940 by the late Sen. Kenneth Wherry, who at that time was chairman of the republican central committee. It has become a traditional biennial event since that time and has attracted considerable national attention.
