

Left-Over Turkey Tips

By BLANCHE SPANN PEASE, Homemaking Editor

Looking for a new way to serve turkey left-over from Thanksgiving? Try adding cooked turkey meat to your favorite curry sauce. Fold cooked elbow spaghetti into this mixture to add heartiness and extra amounts of food energy. Then pour the mixture into a greased casserole and bake at 350 F. about 20 to 25 minutes. Mushrooms added to the curry sauce along with the turkey will give a richer flavor and add an elegant note to the luscious casserole. Serve hot with chutney.

In telling you what to do with left-over turkey I may be assuming a lot. Your family may be the type that raids the refrigerator and picks what is left to the bone. Seems to me I know some people who are an awful lot like that. Grin.

But just in case, remember that dried turkey adds a tempting flavor to a spaghetti, corn or mushroom soup casserole. Sprinkle with buttered bread crumbs before baking in a moderate oven.

If you want something strictly different to do with left-over turkey, peel four medium onions, cover with water and cook until tender. It takes about 25 minutes. Remove centers from onions, leaving a shell of two or three layers. Chop onion centers.

While onions are cooking, cook four ounces elbow macaroni. Drain and rinse. Beat one egg and add 1 1/3 cups milk, 1/2 cup enriched bread crumbs, 3/4 teaspoon salt and a dash of pepper.

Stir in chopped onion, macaroni and one cup cooked turkey meat. Fill onion shells with macaroni mixture. Pour the remaining macaroni mixture into an eight-inch square baking pan and arrange the filled onions on top. Sprinkle crisp chopped bacon over all and bake in moderate oven of 350 F. about 30 minutes. Makes four delicious servings.

A Dorseyite Wins Subscription

With the busiest of busy seasons over again, I've been doing very well with my correspondence. Since I'm one of those who kind of let such things ride along I can fairly gloat over the number of letters I've written lately. I have some neighbors who are wonderful correspondents and how I envy them!

My youngest child started to school this fall and how different it seems around home! I find myself doing things that I haven't done for ages. Guess I must have been spending a lot of time with my baby before.

Yesterday, with the help of my partner, I upholstered a chair and it looks so nice.

Today, I'm baking bread. In warm weather I shy away from heat so in the cold months, we make up for it.

Our second son's birthday anniversary falls on Thanksgiving this year so the dessert will certainly have to be cake and likely ice cream. A desire for baked ham has already been voiced so our meal will probably be based around that.

I'm going to enclose some recipes that I think will help those who haven't cooked for long and which are good for this season.

pepper, sage or onion as desired, two cups cracker crumbs. Moisten all well with rich milk. Place in a large flat pan and cover with thin coat of catsup. Bake in a moderate oven until well done.

DUMPLINGS
One cup flour, 1 1/2 teaspoons baking powder, one egg (beaten), 1/3 cup milk, two tablespoons melted fat or salad oil.

Sift flour, baking powder and salt together. Combine egg, milk and fat and add to dry ingredients, to make a soft dough. Drop from teaspoon into stew. Steam 15 minutes.

CHERRY DESSERT
Combine in a bowl and let sit, one cup unsweetened cherries, 3/4 cup sugar, one teaspoon vanilla. In a separate bowl, combine: One cup sugar, three teaspoons baking powder, one cup flour, 3/4 cup milk.

Put dough in greased dish, then put the cherry mixture on top. Bake until a nice brown crust forms over the top of the cherries at 375 to 400 F.

'Divine Reward' Is Presented

An appreciative audience attended "The Divine Reward," a three-act drama presented by the senior sodality of St. Mary's academy on Tuesday evening, November 23, in the academy auditorium.

The lead was well played by Helen Vitt. Peggy Degnan and Jeanne Cole provided humor in their roles as village gossips. Pat Gokke gave a good portrayal of the village priest. Other characters who affected the life of Catherine Labouré were taken by the remainder of the senior class.

Miriam Troshynski appeared as the blessed virgin. Kay Martin sang a selection. The academy will not have school on the Friday following Thanksgiving.

History Class Draws Interest

"European History 104" from the Wayne State Teachers college is in progress at the O'Neill study center, which convenes nine consecutive Saturdays. Miss Laura Simonson is the instructor.

Besides the lecturing, other activities of the course are panel discussions, films, book reports, current events and special reports on personalities of the Fifteenth to Nineteenth centuries.

Enrolled in the class are: Mrs. Iolene Cleveland and Mrs. Lucille Linke of Bassett, Rita Anderson of Newport, Lottie Faith of Creighton, Leah Serck of Emmet, Gene Closson of O'Neill, Willa W. Schollmeyer of Redbird, Mrs. Elsie Ballantyne of Page, Lois Schaaf of Stuart, William Schipman, Mrs. Clara Harley and Mrs. Chloe Adams, all of Chambers.

Mrs. Leona Shoemaker, Mrs. Florence Schultz, Mrs. Alice Fritton, Mrs. Winnie Mullen and Mrs. Ellen Seger, all of the O'Neill public schools; Mrs. Nona Beckwith, Mrs. Evelyn Jungman, Mrs. Celia Backhaus and Mrs. Emma Crozier, all of the Atkinson public schools.

Nearly all in this group were enrolled in the course, "Representative Americans," under the direction of D. H. Zemanek last spring.

These courses provide opportunities for individuals to continue their college preparation while employed or while at home.
