IT'S SMART TO EAT BREAKFAST

Off to a good start with a better breakfast—for a better morning, better work, and better grades.

This was shown in recent scientific tests conducted at a distinguished medical school of a leading mid-west university, when 25 healthy boys 12 to 14 years of age were critically observed for a period of 23 weeks.

From this study, it is of interest to all mothers and meal-planners to learn that:

1. Maximum work rate and maximum work output were significantly less in the late morning hours when breakfast was omitted.
2. It was the consensus of the school authorities that the omission of breakfast exerted a significant detrimental effect both on the attitude and scholastic attainment of the boys who followed this practice during the time they were in school.
3. The subjects showed no significant change in body weight whether they ate no breakfast or a basic cereal breakfast so long as their total caloric intake per day was not changed.

The conclusions drawn from the study of these boys not only confirmed many of the findings which applied to young women and young men, but demonstrated that, for the most part, the good breakfast habit is a sound nutritional principle that applies to teen-agers and the young and old alike.

The quickest, easiest, and least expensive of all breakfasts is the cereal breakfast, which is as effective nutritionally as other breakfasts. Using the patently accepted basic breakfast pattern of fruit, cereal, milk, bread and butter, 1/4 to 1/2 of the day's total food requirements is provided.
