President Eisenhower, if correctly quoted, has taken on the job of "revamping" the republican party. Mr. Eisenhower's hands are not wholly free from stain resulting from the recent special session of the senate. Seems to this republican that the chief executive went astray by offering compliments to one side of the controversy with which the senators had dealt. And what is there to "revamp" about the GOP, The republican party has a historic past, a living present and a work ahead. And the president will have his brow adorned with laurels of praise from all Americans if his abilities, his rugged patriotism, his devotion to American traditions are concentrated on the job of chief executive of our great country and concern for the welfare of all its people rather than manipulating partisan maneuvers.

A blonde siren of East German roots has been sentenced by West German courts to five years imprisonment for passing information about allied movements to the communist bosses. And nothing done to the U.S. army officer who gave the bewitching dame the secrets.

Some Indiana farmers find the eastern time belt slipped over this way in recent months not to their liking. A group of rural citizens have goften together, retained legal counsel and go to court asking that the Marion city council be ordered, directed and commanded to move the community back into the central time zone. City guys think it's funny, as a farmer can go to bed or get up any old time regardless of what the hands on the clock indicate. The concern in rural regions is the schools. Getting out an hour earlier to get John and Mary off to school a few miles distant may be objectionable.

Son and daughter-in-law left at daybreak this morning, the day before Christmas, to drive up to Chicago, Ill., to attend the funeral of an uncle. Death is no respecter of times or days. It is appointed unto man once to die, and so during the season set apart in memory of a Babe in a manger the harvest of death goes on.

post-war aid is less than it actually is. The real question is exactly how much aid have we given

Britain since the end of the war? Why select six

Here is the picture of the real magnitude of

(1) From July 1, 1945, through June 30, 1954, we gave Britain (outright gifts from our treasury) $4,225,055,000. This is broken down into: (a)

UNRRA-$8,369,000; (b) technical exchange pro-through June 30, 1954-$3,786,000,000 ($200,000,000 above the white paper estimate of the British government); (d) surplus products which we gave to England to sell - $72,200,000; (e) American Red

A guy down at Baltimore, Md., has gone to court with something original as a reason for a divorce, clainming he has lost 80 pounds in recent months because of his mate's poor cooking and he having to walk the streets nights because a girl friend of his spouse occupies his half of the bed. . . An Alabama woman is reported to be the first person ever struck by a shooting star, and thereby a suit for ownership of the fragment of a visitor from outer space has been taken to court to be determined. The stone from the meteor that struck the woman is valued at $5,000 and the owner of the house where the woman lives thinks it should belong to her as it knocked a hole in the roof of the house, but the other thinks "God sent it to her" because it landed on her while she lay on her bed. A workman at an Indiana plant was killed when struck, not by a meteor, but by a rock that fell from a lift at a construction project. . . Another mother of criminal leanings or driven to it by sheer want schooled her young daughter in the craft of shop-lifting. They are caught by the inexorable grip of the law. A mother unfit for the high calling of motherhood.

The week coming to a close Christmas day witnessed a rush of gift buying, parties, dances, banquets, church gatherings, songs by singing groups, soliciting funds for charitable and uplift efforts, lighted windows from color adorned trees, groups and clubs and societies planning and meeting and everyboy on the go, mail carriers loaded with packages and ornate greeting cards with cheering messages from friends and distant sons and daughters, brothers, sisters, fathers and mothers, cousins, uncles and aunts. And something of a worried look clouding the countenance of those hurrying along the streets wondering if gifts for all had been provided, children excited and expectant, a little one here and there among the poor of earth left to wonder why that fur clad figure they call Santa Claus visits only the kids who have plenty and passes by with not even a smile to cheer her wishful little heart. And into the gaities of Christmas and the new year there came out of the shadows a deathgriping hand that here and there marked homes for the desolation of one vacant chair.

Four baby boys uttered their first cry as they came into a troubled world on Christmas day at the Marion city hospital. "Mothers and

This is practically three times the aid reported

Britain since the end of World War II amounts to by the British white paper for the selected period for the six years 1948 "to last June 30." But even the "three times figure" does not include other items which have been a direct charge against the American taxpayer. Let us cite just two: (1) Under lend-lease we gave the British $28,600,797,000 worth of American war materials. Under reverse lend-lease, the British charged us with $5,300,000,- 000, leaving a total of over $23,000,000,000. Granted that a considerable portion of this 23 billions was used up, there remains the vital question of how many ships (mercantile and naval) the British have kept. Our sources indicate that they have retained a number of such vessels. These were clearly returnable to the U.S. But the whole lend-lease account was hurriedly cast up at the end of World War II and its equitable accuracy is highly suspect. There is still another item which has not even been considered in estimating direct Ameri-

Long Wait

A guest at the Golden hotel new year's night was Mrs. Lutie Goodin, a Gregory, S.D., school teacher. She was obliged to spend the night in O'Neill to make connections the following afternoon — Sunday — with the O'Neill-to-Winner bus, and had successfully and happily approached the last leg of her holiday journey. The late afternoon and early evening of the second day of the new year will be memorable to Mrs. Goodin because:

While her sojourn at the hotel had been pleasant the bus from Winner to O'Neill was tardy. The bus depot closed before the bus Mrs. Hagerty Offers arrived; hence Mrs. Goodin stood by her suitcase outside the depot. Having spent 18 hours in town, she didn't want to risk missing the only transportation pros-

Darkness by now was envelop-ng O'Neill and the street corner. The wayfarer told us her story. She had purchased her ticket; the depot was locked up; it was imperative she be at work the following morning.

got into the act. Mrs. Stewart and the kids invited Mrs. Goodin to climb aboard and get warm in the car where she could continue to keep an eye on the bus stop.

The editor went to the Golden and informed C. C. Golden of the predicament of their ex-guest. Mr. Golden began scouring the auto service stations making inquiries relative to someone who might be headed up Gregory way.

This scribe got on the phone. L D. Putnam, who frequently makes trips to Martin, couldn't be reached. R. D. ("Shorty") Lanais was encountered in a cafe (his wife's people live at Gregory and he frequently makes the 90-mile junket).

My wife has been regretting all day we hadn't planned to go to Gregory," he explained. I told him the story of Mrs. Goodin and he took off down the street to offer a ride-pending, of course, his wife's sanction of a trip at night involving their small children. So far so good.

Bluebirds Appear

Meanwhile, Mr. Golden had been told at the Bridge station some "Ramolds" were enroute to Winner but were stopping in the West End for a cup of coffee. Golden took after the "Ramolds," stepped up to an Indian couple in the Nu-Way cafe.

"Are you the Ramolds?" he queried.

"No," came the response from descendants of Sitting Bull. We're the Bluebirds."

Asked if they'd take along a strand woman, the Bluebirds said "Fine." Golden hastened to relate the good news to Mrs. Goodin, who, in the meantime, had gone to the Landis home to meet Mrs. Landis and enjoy a cordial cup of coffee before their departure. Suddenly, Mr. Landis excused imself, bolted to the door, climbed into his car and shot up the street. When he pulled away from the table he mumbled something to the effect the bus in question had that moment passed the Landis house (darkness had closed in by then). Landis overtook the bus at the drivein theater corner. The driver complained he had overslept and was in great haste to make up time. He drove back to pick up Mrs. Goodin.
