$18 Million Budget Increase Seen

By MELVIN PAUL, The Frontier's Statehouse Correspondent

LINCOLN—The legislature this week found its work cut out for it in reconciling the pressing demands for more governmental services with the desire for holding the line on spending.
 Outgoing Gov. Robert Crosby in his budget message put it straight to the legislators with this remark: "Two years ago I cut the budget requests of the agencies and bore the ill will of the numerous groups which have a special interest in these agencies. The legislature in most instances increased the amounts I had recommended, thus winning the plaudits of those same special interest groups."
 "It is not necessary that the governor play the villain. The roles can be reversed."

Crosby said he was junking the concept of "restraint in state government spending" he fostered two years ago. Now he said he was recommending the amount of money the agencies need for a "reasonable performance" of their duties.
 With this Crosby outlined a budget which conceivably could hit the $215 million mark, the highest in state history by almost $18 million. It would include around $45 million in property taxes, also a record high.

It is estimated it would take a total state property tax levy of around $7.75 on each $1,000 worth of assessed property (property is now assessed at half its actual value). The present total including special state levies is $6.69.

The Increases—
 Here are the big increases recommended from the state general fund, which is largely supported by property tax revenues:
 An increase of $2.8 million for the University of Nebraska for a $17.8 million total. The university wanted an $18.8 million total. Crosby said this is necessary to keep the university on a level with those in nearby states.
 An increase of $2.4 million for the state board of control for a total of $13.4 million. Much of the increase is for a better mental health program, geared to give intensive treatment to patients in an effort to cure them as quickly as possible.

A total of $1.1 million for the state safety patrol. Part of this is so the patrol can take back responsibilities of running the state truck weighing scales and also conducting driver's license examinations. But much of the addition would go to hire 23 more men to go to work patrolling the highways.

An increase of $600,000 for the state teachers' training colleges, necessary to keep instructors who are being lured to other states by higher salaries.
 The major saving grace was the state assistance department where declining relief rolls and other factors have cut the need by $1.7 to $13.3 million.

New Gov. Victor Anderson of Lincoln gives his budget message in another two weeks. He has said it won't differ much from Crosby's.

Recommendations—
 Outgoing Governor Crosby had some other recommendations to offer the legislature:
 A new governor's mansion should be built across from the statehouse. This would take at least $150,000 he said.

The school for the blind should be moved away from its antiquated housing at Nebraska City to a town "with a good college." Although Kearney has been suggested, Crosby did not mention it in his speech.

Something must be done about salaries of state officers so government workers can hire good men.
 The board of control should be given enough money for a staff of "highly qualified assistants." Crosby said he thinks the board of control now is "engulfed in too many details."

The state should set up a program of aid for the permanently and totally disabled. Since federal aid is available, Nebraska is losing its share.

Money should be appropriated for the state turnpike authority so it can make engineering studies on toll road possibilities. Although the authority plans to ask for $150,000, Crosby made no recommendation.

Inauguration—
 As Victor Anderson was inaugurated as 27th governor of Nebraska, the Lincoln hardware merchant outlined a program of "sound self-government" in his inaugural speech to the legislature.

"Let us ask for tax dollars sparingly and invest them wisely. Let us see that our government is kept close to the people," said the new governor.

New Bills—
 A bill calling for the sale of the state school lands was one of the early controversial bills introduced. Sen. Monroe Bixler of Harrison was principal introducer. The measure is expected to find considerable opposition.

Bixler also introduced a measure calling for "indefinitely" extending the sixth cent of gasoline tax. Revenues from this tax, due to expire May 9, go to the state highway department and have been credited with making a record $24 million highway building program possible.

A measure to set up a commission to supervise the state's booming new oil and gas industry was also tossed into the legislative mill. Purpose is to keep from wasting this resource, introducer A. A. Fenske of Sunol said.

Penitentiary Probe—
 Still another investigation of conditions at the state penitentiary loomed as Sen. Lester Anderson of Aurora introduced a resolution calling for a "fact-finding" legislative committee.

Senator Anderson said he thinks a report by a special citizens committee has been "whitewashed." The report was critical of the penitentiary. Anderson said there should be a "housecleaning" of top officials at the institution.

His resolution came on the heels of a report on the penitentiary by Sanford Bates, internationally known penal expert from Trenton, N.J., Bates, brought here by the board of control, which supervises the state penitentiary, gave a report with mingled praise and criticism.

Bates said the penitentiary "hole" (or jail) should be rebuilt.

the professional staff of the prison should be increased, and guard salaries should be raised to get better men. "The rank and file of officers have a dim idea as to what the purpose of a corrective institution is . . ." Bates reported.

HOW ABOUT THE ELECTRICAL WIRING SYSTEM IN YOUR HOME?

Can you plug-in electrical appliances whenever, and wherever, you wish—
 Without having to hunt for an outlet, or blowing a fuse!

THE CHANCES ARE, that if your home is 10 years old, or more, your electrical appliance capacity is limited by too few outlets, an inadequate fuse panel, and branch circuit wiring that is too small in size.

Electricity is similar to water. It flows along wires much as water flows through pipes. If too many faucets are connected to an inadequate plumbing system, all too often you'll find you can open only one faucet at a time, or else the result is only a trickle of water. The same is true with your home electrical system. If the branch circuits are too few, or if the wire size is too small, only a "trickle" of electricity will reach your appliances. The result? A fuse blows, or the appliance will not operate correctly.

The answer? A modern, Adequate Wiring System designed to fit the electrical needs of YOUR family and home today, and tomorrow! Why not plan for Tomorrow's Better Living—Today, by consulting your own electrical contractor? Ask him to inspect and make recommendations for a truly modern, Adequate Wiring System for your home!
