Restrict Roughage Shipping to Wyoming
Wyoming has quarantined all straw and all other forage crops into that state because of the danger of introducing noxious weeds. It will now be necessary to inspect all roughage shipments headed for Wyoming. The certificates, in triplicate, must show freedom from noxious weeds.

Farmers, ranchers and hay dealers who intend to ship hay into Wyoming had better get in touch with their county extension agent for more details or contact the state noxious weed division of the state department of agriculture at the statehouse in Lincoln. County Agent A. Neil Dawes states this will affect quite a number of producers and dealers in Holt county.
