High AEC Post to Former Bristow Man

Mr. Nelson started the Rotarians when he said "a piece of uranium the size of a baseball has the same potential energy as a pile of TNT big enough to fill the Yankee stadium."

"The discovery of uranium fission constitutes one of the most spectacular events in the history of science," the manager of the vast Savannah office reminded the audience. It involves many nations, many scientists, free communication of scientific ideas, highly trained imagination and precise experimentation.

At the present time, "this industry is devoted almost wholly to the production of weapons and to the development of a diversified weapons stockpile," the speaker said. He added that this is not by choice but is made necessary by the critical state of present day world affairs and will continue to be necessary so long as we stand between ruthless aggressors and the peoples of the free world.

"Let us all hope and pray for the day when, instead of devoting this great industry to the stockpiling of devastating weapons, we can instead dedicate it to the production of power for turning the wheels of commerce and trade in a peaceful world."

"But the fact that the use of atomic energy for weapons has remained the primary objective has not kept the commission from taking the first steps toward the production of power for peacetime uses. Reactors are now being built which will operate under high pressures and temperatures for the purpose of generating electrical energy. Five such reactors are being planned by the commission, each of a different type, in order that we may study their relative economics. Much of the development and design work has already been done."

"Under the new atomic energy act of 1954, which permits private ownership of production facilities, it is expected that much of the development of peaceful uses of the atom will be undertaken by private industry. The first large power-producing unit is to be built in the Pittsburgh area by the Duquesne Light company, under an arrangement whereby the project will be financed jointly by private industry and government. The other four units will also be partially financed by the Government.

Mr. Nelson believes it is only a matter of time until an atomic power plant has been developed which can convert all the energy of uranium into useful electrical power. When this comes to pass, the speaker cited, the cost of electricity will be a minor household expense and almost all manufactured items will be produced at a lower cost. In fact, he believes that power would become so cheap until it would no longer be metered into homes but sold on a flat rate basis.

He also stressed this mass production of power would revolutionize the standard of living, not only in the United States, but in all nations.

Mr. Nelson gave a brief history of the Savannah River plant which is located 15 miles from Aiken showing on a chart the principal facilities and some indication of the immensity of the project.

The speaker cancelled an engagement in New York to address the Rotary club at Aiken.
