Watch for Tax Reform Legislation

LINCOLN—As the legislature moves into the heavy debate months of this session, a bewildering array of controversial issues seem to be lying around waiting to explode.

But even veteran senators disagree on which ones may cause the most trouble in the 1955 session.

In a series of exclusive interviews here are what some of the leaders in the legislature had to say about the prospects in this session:

Speaker Dwight Burney of Hartington said that "taxes, roads and schools" will all provide argument and debate in the coming months.

In the field of taxes, Burney suggested that the issues to be watched are "passing laws to carry out the tax reform constitutional amendments passed by the voters last fall, broadening of the tax base, and placing a severance tax on gas and oil to provide money for the schools."

Major issues in connection with roads are "how much authority to give to the highway department and how much money should go to the state for roads, how much to the counties, and how much to the cities."

In considering the schools the legislature will have to decide "how far we should go on restricting and on teachers' certification," Burney said.

Salaries Troubles—Sen. John Beaver of Beemer, chairman of the legislative council, said he thinks the hottest topics in early debate will be bills on raising salaries of state officials. Beaver said that in singling out this issue, he didn't mean to infer he thought it was the most important.

"But we seem to have those who feel our state officers are entitled to a raise in pay. Other feel that while salaries are too low this is not time to change them. Or they may have other reasons such as campaign promises made at home," Beaver explained.

But the Beemer senator said he didn't think this session would be as controversial as the 1953 session. He said there seemed less chance of factions developing because there seems to be a willingness to sit down and talk things out.

Predicts Controversy—However, Sen. Karl Vogel of Omaha disagreed. In his interview he said that he thought this session would be more acrimonious than last time.

Asked what issue might bring trouble, Vogel said, "That's like getting your hand cut on a buzz saw and then trying to figure out which tooth did the actual damage."

But he did predict that the highway law revision would bring considerable controversy as the legislature decided who should have the powers of relocating highways and deciding on schedules of improvement.

Vogel felt the sales tax issue wouldn't be a major troublemaker as some predict.

Money Troubles—Two members of the budget committee thought some major struggles might come over the appropriations of money to state agencies.

Committee Chairman Hal Bridenbaugh of Dakota City said this would be a real problem facing the legislature.

Otto Liebbers of Lincoln summarized it this way: "Our problem will be finding enough money to meet the costs of government and yet keep the taxpayer in mind. The costs of the same services keep mounting and yet we will be trying to maintain the same level of service for the same amount of money."

Sen. Monroe Bixler of Harrison, chairman of the revenue committee, predicted the biggest debates will come over the ton-mile tax on trucks, the sales tax, and over the tax reform measures.

Bixler said, also, that something must be done to get relief for the school land leaseholders and he expects plenty of opposition on that.

stages we are already fighting hard over minor things."

Two veteran senators are predicting less controversy. Sen. Charles Tvrdik of Omaha says this will be a more harmonious session. He discounts the idea that there will be a battle over the sales tax.

Sen. O. H. Person of Wahoo thinks the session may be finished by decoration day, or two weeks earlier than 1953. He sees danger signals in bills affecting the loads trucks can carry and in the tax reform measures.

Reconsiderations—The legislature acted twice recently as though it couldn't make up its mind. These came on reconsiderations of earlier action taken on a gasoline tax allocation bill and on the confirmation of Ernest Johnson of Chadron for reappointment to the state normal board.

Actually, this wasn't as fickle as it sounds.

On the gasoline tax bill the legislature failed by one vote to pass a measure "unfreezing" funds now tied up in a court suit so the counties could get their share of the tax. Reason for the defeat was that senators from thinly populated counties didn't like the formula of allocation in the bill.

But friends of the bill routed Sen. Ernest Hubka of Beatrice out of his bed where he was ill with influenza and brought him to Lincoln. A motion was made to reconsider and with Hubka's vote there were the 29 necessary to pass the bill into law immediately.

On the Johnson confirmation, this was the sequence of events. The question had brought severe controversy in Chadron. The legislative committee on committees held up the confirmation pending further study as to what were the objections to Johnson.

Then a newspaper printed a story about some senators threatening drastic action toward the Chadron college to straighten out the fiore. This brought fears on both sides and Chadronites begged the legislature to go ahead with the confirmation quickly.

This was done. But the next day Johnson reportedly tried to balk action by the Chadron college president, Dr. Barton Kline, before the state normal board.

Senator Bixler then moved to consider the Johnson confirmation, and read a letter from Ex-Gov. Crosby approving the reconsideration. That's what the legislature did—withdrawing its prior confirmation.

He will also continue to operate the elevator at Clearwater.

His son, Donald, was graduated from Ewing high school. While in the army he served in Korea and Guam.

It will be a valentine's day session. The refreshments will be served by Mrs. William W. Griffin, Mrs. J. L. McCarville, Jr., and Mrs. Edward M. Gallagher.

Guests of Herleys—Mr. and Mrs. Ray Bettenhausen and daughter were Sunday evening guests of Mr. and Mrs. Reed Herley.

Blind School—The entire legislature took a trip to Nebraska City to visit the state school for the blind. Three bills have been introduced to move the school either to Kearney, Omaha or Crete. The general belief among legislators was that it would stay at Nebraska City. However, newspaper stories that many of the students wanted the school moved and that officials of the school are dissatisfied with the present location prompted the public health committee to schedule another trip for its members there.

14 Present for Auxiliary Meet—CHAMBERS—The American Legion auxiliary of Chambers post 320 met at the home of Mrs. Ester Wood on Friday evening February 4, with 14 members present.

It was voted to send $1 to the national president for her project of the year—the refurbishing of the Flag house at Baltimore, Md., also to send $5 to be used for the aid of needy and delinquent children. Poppies have been received and counted. Plans for a candidate for girls' state were discussed.
