Heavy Weather for Tax Reforms

LINCOLN—The legislature this week was taking its first hard look at proposals to reform the property tax system administration. The first bill to sail across the boards ran into heavy weather right off the bat. It was LB 150, a proposal to exempt from taxation all but seven items of household goods. It would replace the present system where all household goods are taxed but the householder gets a $200 exemption first. In two days of debate the legislature refused to sink the bill. But the loaded on some extra items such as fur coats, diamonds, jewelry, musical instruments, and electric dishwashers not included by the writers of the measure. LB 150 was one of seven tax reform bills written by a special legislative council tax study committee, headed by Sen. Otto Liebers of Lincoln. This same committee recommended the constitutional amendment proposals placed on the November ballot by the legislature in a special session last spring and upon which the voters acted in the general election.

The fight over the measure thus might be one of the most crucial of this session. A third tax measure, LB 151, was killed by the revenue committee and then revived. The point of this bill is that everyone keeps books on the basis of the first of the month and the present 10th of the month doesn't fit anybody's system. Business Inventories—The other tax measure to be heard thus far, LB 149, would provide for assessing merchants on the basis of their annual average inventory. At present they are taxed on the basis of what they have on hand on March 10. Witnesses at the revenue committee hearing on this bill said that the present system disrupts business because many merchants intentionally let their stocks get low for March 10. Many farmers sell their cattle before this date depressing the market. Using the average inventory over the year's period would mean there would be no point in juggling inventories. Testimony was that it probably greatly increase the tax revenue from this source.

Swedes Need 2d Overtime to Win Tigers' Hopes for Lincoln Fade

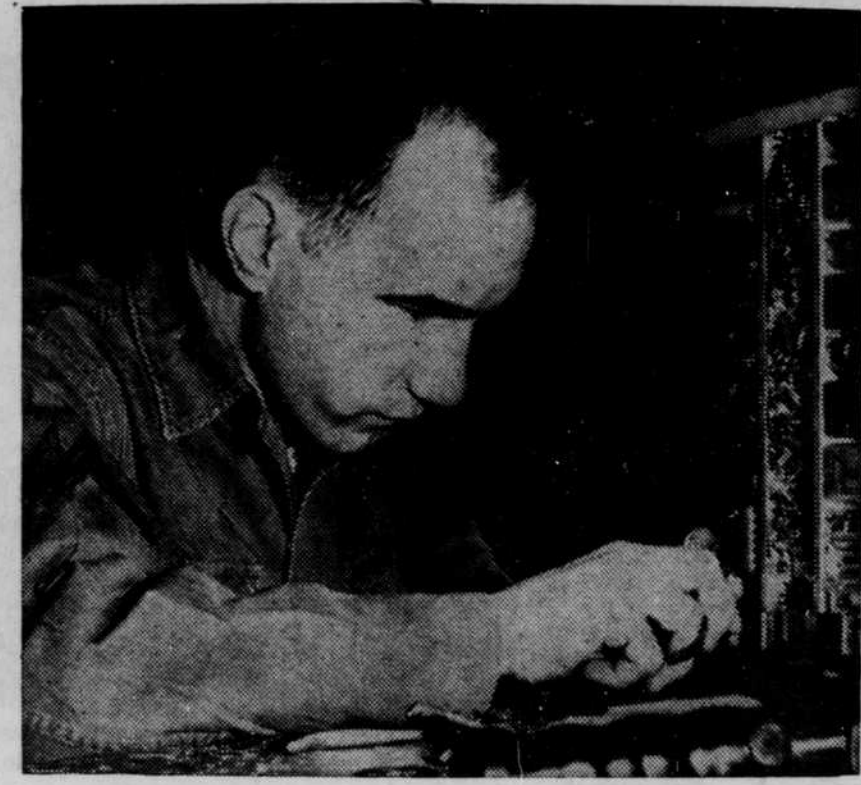

PLAINVIEW—The Inman Tigers' hopes for a place in the state tournament were blasted Thursday night in the finals of the class E playoffs held at Plainview. The Concord Swedes came from behind to win the game that went into two overtime periods. Wylie Erwin, Concord hot-shot, was responsible for making those two all-important points. Concord trailed during the first three quarters, but managed to tie up the score, 51-51, as the final buzzer sounded. Each squad managed to collect six tallies in the first overtime period. Butterfield of Inman had a pair of freethrows but was not able to put the ball through the hoop. Erwin was the only player able to tally in the second overtime. The Inman team did the best job on the floor, but Concord's freethrow performance earned the game. The Tigers scored 23 fielders while Concord was collecting 20. Concord hit 19 of 29 gift gifts and Inman dumped in 11 of 20. Erwin hit 11 field goals and five of six chances from the foul line for 27 points. Don Kelley of Inman did one better. He scored 12 times from the field and four times out of five from the gift stripe for a nifty point tally. Arlen Magnuson hit 15 for Concord and Gene Couch scored 13 for the losers. On Wednesday night, March 2, the Tigers defeated Merriman in the first playoff game. Inman earlier had captured the Brunswick tourney and Merriman had won the class E title at Valentine. Part of this has come because citizens have become slowly convinced that it is going to take money to clear up many of the highway problems. The other was that the highway department has done a special job of wooing some of its strongest foes—the truckers, petroleum interests and farm groups. A lobbyist for one of these groups said that much credit should go to State Engineer L. N. Ress "who has bent over backwards to work out these things with us". Highway Program—The passage of the gas tax extension came on the heels of the highway department's announcement of its two year program. It includes 461 miles of black-topping and 52 miles of new concrete road. Major highways scheduled for improvement are US 30, 81, 83, and 20, and Nebraska highways 3, 29, 50, and 93. A major tip-off of things to come was contained in the list of highway projects planned. It was a listing of one mile of road from Ogallala to the interstate system. Newspaper reporters followed this up and learned that if the federal bureau of roads continues to demand high standards for this defense highway project such towns as Ogallala will be bypassed. Ogallala widened its streets in 1948 and 1949 to head off such
