These are the hot days when appetites seem to need tempting. Salads are special for tempting. To add zest to an old favorite, use cream cheese dressing on potato salad. Here's how to make the cream cheese dressing. Use two packages of cream cheese, 1/2 cup mayonnaise and two to four tablespoons milk or cream. Allow cheese to soften to room temperature, add mayonnaise and blend well with fork or beater, until the mixture is smooth and fluffy. For a thinner dressing beat in the milk or cream. (You can use chive cream cheese instead of cream cheese if you wish.)

For the potato salad, mix the cream cheese dressing described above, but use the chive cream cheese and mix it with two tablespoons French dressing. Blend well and pour over the potato salad, mix until all is well coated with dressing. For a stuffed pear salad, use pear halves, chive cream cheese dressing and salad greens. Fill the pear centers with a teaspoonful of the cream cheese dressing, sprinkle with paprika, place on salad greens.

RAISIN CARROT SALAD One-half cup seedless raisins, 1 1/2 cups raw carrots (chopped fine), 1/2 cup finely diced celery, 1/2 cup chopped walnut kernels, 1/4 teaspoon salt, dash cayenne, four tablespoons mayonnaise. Wash raisins in hot water and combine with carrots, celery, walnut kernels, salt, cayenne and mayonnaise. Chill and serve on lettuce. Serves six. — tfw —

Don't Envy 'Lazy' Town People Dear Blanche: You should see our kitchen paper. It looks so neat and clean—just like a new print dress. With the help of a good friend we got the paper on. She pasted and measured. I hung and cut. First time for me. We always lived in houses with painted walls. Now I wish we had a lot of rooms to redecorate. It's fun. We were nearly finished before dad got home. He wasn't very complimentary about my wallpaper taste. But he'll get used to it. Now, I'm going to make new curtains of green print. Just straight, I think, with a ruffle on the top and maybe two at the bottom.

Dad is reading his Saturday Evening Post—but this is Wednesday. The kids are outside playing. Today I painted the black baseboards in the kitchen. Opened the doors and windows to let in air and a few big flies. When I get the cupboards touched up, this kitchen won't know you the next time you come. It will be so proud!

In our 20 years of gardening, I think we got the garden in later than ever this year, due to the weather. Our 10-year-old planter a garden, too, and when I look the empty radish package I knew how thick he must have planted it. With our carrot seed, I put radishes, to mark the rows. In between the onions is lettuce seed. Oh, I save on soil, like I do on food, as we haven't too much space for a garden. Don't ever envy the "lazy" town people. Nice weather brings every child outdoors and to every-one's yards and flower beds. One neighbor said she couldn't keep one flower bed, as kids ride trikes over it and run it anyway. Cutting across their yard has killed grass, too. A farm is the place to raise children to play and to work. — tfw —

Summer Food Suggestions HAMB SCRAPPLE Two cups ground ham, one cup 1/2 cups ground ham, one cup 1/2 cup salt, 2 1/2 cups boiling corn meal, one tablespoon sugar, water, 1/2 cup milk, 1 1/2 teaspoons prepared mustard, drippings or lard. Mix together cornmeal, sugar and salt. Add slowly to boiling water and milk. Cook slowly in covered pan, stirring occasionally, about 20 minutes. Add ham and mustard and mix well. Pack into loaf pan. When cold and firm, slice in 14 one-inch slices. Fry slices in hot fat until brown on each side.

SAYS SANDHILL SAL Arrest, murder—the officer for accident prevention (and death) is the man at the wheel! Stop, look and listen are not enough. Never try to call a racing train's bluff! Some girls are so pretty they think even the trains are whistling at them.
