Rotate on Hot Lunch Plan

By BLANCHE SPANN PEASE

September already and lots of the school youngsters are back in school this week. For rural schools and for youngsters who go to town school but live in the country, this means school lunches.

Most town school systems have a hot lunch program but many of our rural schools still do not have any hot dish for school youngsters.

There are ways though that this can be solved. If the mothers of school children want to bother, they can see that their small fry have some form of hot dish or hot soup for lunch.

This can be done by each mother, taking turns in seeing that the kids get a hot dish one day a week, or as often as her turn occurs.

She can send a kettle of vegetable soup, vegetable beef, tomato, or any other kind of soup to school to be heated at noon and served with crackers or croutons. Or if not too far from school, a hot dish with plenty to serve all school youngsters can be taken at noon.

There are other methods. A coldpack canner kettle with rack can be purchased for the school, and teacher can see that it goes on the stove in time for heating up foods sent in pint jars by mothers. The jars can be set in cold water and heated up—and soups or other foods sent to be warmed in the jars. Thus each student brings their own food and the teacher or an 8th grade student sees that it is suitably warmed up.

Another way is to purchase a supply of canned soups and have your small fry open the can, add a can of water and warm up. Our soup for his or her lunch. Our son used to do this part of the time, and shared the soup with another youngster, with whose mother we had an agreement. They furnished the soup part of the time.

Bob had one of those satchel-type dinner buckets complete with a thermos bottle. I always sent hot cocoa, or some form of hot soup in the thermos, if he did not get a hot dish any other way. I sometimes used canned soup, often I made some form of hot soup, and we had the same kind at home, as he had at school for lunch.

I also sent chicken broken up in noodle soup in the thermos bottle, forms of meat and vegetable soups that could be put in the thermos, bean soups etc.

Send an oil cloth place mat for the child's desk and have the teacher see that the child wipes it clean each day, or have the child roll it up and bring home so you can clean it daily. The alternative is to send a large napkin to be used as a table cloth. Be sure you send attractive napkins for regular daily use, too.

Straws often mean the milk drink will be completely taken because of the straw, so send them now and then. Crisp carrots, straws, cucumber slices (if the youngster is big enough to eat raw cucumbers) celery stalks and pepper rings are nice wrapped in foil for something chewy.

Fresh fruits the year around should travel to school for lunch. Be sure they are washed if the skin is to be eaten. The same thing goes for dried fruits if you send them to be eaten uncooked, wash them first.

Screw topped jars can be used for cooked fruits, salads and such. Be sure if you send a salad that it will not spoil, don't send such things as potatoe salads or cream puddings when it is awfully hot.

A good test of whether or not you are sending good school lunches day-after-day is whether or not you would be willing to eat them day-after-day yourself.

And remember, the wisest thing for you to do is have the big meal at night. Then you know they are getting a good breakfast and a good meal at night, if they must eat an all cold or a partially cold lunch.

There are clever plastic dishes for wedges of pie now, and cup cakes can be baked in paper baking cups. Visit your department store and the "five and ten" for new accessories for the school lunch box and make the lunches more interesting.

When really cold weather sets in, the children can take scrubbed potatoes to school, and alum inum foil, and can roast them in hot ashes. Cheese sandwiches can be broiled or toasted in a wire corn popper and wieners can be warmed in hot water at school for hot wiener sandwiches. Most teachers are willing to cooperate that far.

Get acquainted with your teacher and show her your willingness to cooperate. She'll be glad to help on the question of hot lunches if she knows you will really do your share, in most instances.

Humpal - Schaaf Nuptials Read

ATKINSON — Miss Marilyn Humpal, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Humpal of Atkinson, became the bride of Frank Schaaf, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Schaaf of Atkinson, at a nuptial low mass at St. Joseph's Catholic church in Atkinson on Wednesday, September 2. Rev. Richard Parr officiated at the 10 o'clock ceremony.

The main altar of the church was flanked with white gladioli. Mrs. Robert Cole of Emmet, sister of the bride, Miss Constance Miller and Miss Catherine Weichman, friends of the bride, sang hymns.

Miss Patricia Seger of Atkinson, a friend of the bride, was maid-of-honor. Her gown was fashioned in midnight blue with a satin bodice and jacket and a skirt of tulle. The bridesmaids, Misses Margaret Birmingham of O'Neill, Jeanette Rogers of Hamburg, Ia., and Edyth Clinkscapes of Columbus, friends of the bride, wore identical gowns of aracy blue. They carried cascades of Margaret Fulton gladioli.

Miss Sharon Gaylor of Atkinson and Miss Shirley Skrdla of Stuart were flower girls. They were dressed in street length tulle and satin dresses, styled like those of the bridesmaids in light blue.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of skinner satin and French imported chantilly lace, which curved around the hip and down the train and also formed the bodice and sleeves. The fingertip silk illusion veil fell from a pearl-trimmed coronation crown. She carried an orchid on a prayer book.

Master Jackie Cole of Emmet, a nephew of the bride, was ring-bearer.

The bestman was Frank Brau of Humphrey, a friend of the bridegroom. Morris Brau of Boys Town, Donald Kramer of Atkinson and Leo Monahan of Atkinson, brother-in-law of the bridegroom, ushered.

The bride's mother wore a dress of wedgewood blue lace with black accessories. Mrs. Schaaf, mother of the bridegroom, was dressed in a rose beige crepe with navy accessories. Both mothers wore corsages of pink delight roses.

Following the ceremony a dinner was served at the Knights of Columbus hall to relatives and friends. A reception was held at the home of the bride's parents.

The bride chose a blue flannel suit with red accessories for the wedding trip to Canada and the Western states.

Mrs. Schaaf is a graduate of St. Joseph's high school, Atkinson, the Capitol beauty school of Omaha and attended Duchesne college in Omaha.

Mr. Schaaf is a graduate of St. Joseph's high school in Atkinson. He is employed by the Atkinson Sand & Gravel company.

Following the wedding trip, Mr. and Mrs. Schaaf will make their home in Atkinson.

The grand chapter officers of the Order of the Eastern Star will be guests of the O'Neill chapter Wednesday evening, September 9, at a banquet in the Methodist church at 6:30 o'clock. All members of the Star are invited.
