Boyd Couple in Golden Wedding

by the Marlatts' daughter, Mrs. Hiatt:

FIFTY YEARS

In the autumn of nineteen hundred three, when the harvest was at its peak;

Marlin left his father's farm His lady love to seek.

He found her in an Iowa town, Her name was Gertrude Peck, But Marlin changed it to Marlatt, And they started the homeward trek.

Soon they returned to Spencer And decided to settle down Near the Niobrara river About five miles from town.

Their farming was diversified— Livestock, oats and corn; But this was not all they raised, For three children to them were born.

They drove a horse and buggy For many and many a year; But finally, thanks to Henry Ford, The Model T appeared.

As Marlin learned to drive the car Most everything he'd dodge; And nothing did he ever hit But the doors of the garage.

Many changes have been wrought Down through the passing years; But side by side they've traveled Through sunshine and through tears.

Their children all have married And flown the family nest, But with seven grandchildren This couple have been blessed.

And now for this grand couple, Who have come along life's way, May we offer congratulations On their golden wedding day.

TOMORROW'S HEADLINES?

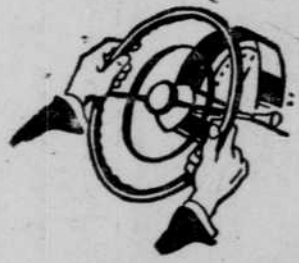

If you picked up your paper tomorrow and read that disaster had wiped out the state of Kansas, killing 40,000 people, injuring every one of the state's 1,905,299 population and causing a property and economic loss of about $4,000,000,000, it would be a national calamity.

But when that disaster comes day by day—killing hundreds, injuring thousands every day, year in and year out—the impact is lost because it didn't happen all in a sudden flash. That, however, is the annual toll of highway deaths and injuries and economic loss. 40,000 killed; 2,000,000 injured; cost $4,000,000,000—in a single year.

This greatest U. S. tragedy is caused mainly by reckless, speeding and drunken drivers, riding their super-powered cars over the nation's highways and byways. Clear skies and straight dry roads are the setting for three out of four fatal accidents. Week-ends and holidays are the times of greatest danger—highest casualty lists. Saturday is the most dangerous day. Drivers in an alcoholic haze are a major factor in swelling the mounting death toll.

What can be done about it? Slow down! Thirteen states with speed limits of 50 miles or less had but 26 per cent of the deaths and the rate declined 18 per cent in one year. If that decline had been nationwide, nearly 12,000 lives would have been saved, 600,000 less injuries.

Slow down! SLOW DOWN! Keep your name off the casualty list.

SLOW DOWN—LIVES ARE IN YOUR HANDS!
