Soil Conservation Has Role in School Studies

By MISS ALICE FRENCH
Holt Co. Supt. of Schools
Soil conservation is a definite part of the social studies course in the seventh and eighth grades of the rural schools the year they study Nebraska. It is also integrated in other classes such as arithmetic where the statistics are used in problems and graphs, English classes where essays, themes and letters are written on different topics and science with experiments. Many interesting booklets, pamphlets, comic books, etc. can be obtained from the United States department of agriculture and these may be used in reading classes, for special reports and on reading tables.

One of the red letter days for the study of soil conservation in Holt county this year was the conservation day in September when seventh and eighth grade pupils from both rural and town schools were guests of the Holt County Soil Conservation District in O'Neill. The day's program included films, talks, demonstration and was completed by a conservation "chalk talk" by L. D. Martell of Pierce.

Following the conservation day program, the district association announced an essay contest for students on the topic, "My Ideas on How the Soil Conservation District Can Help Farmers and Ranchers in Holt County." Forty-four essays from 14 schools were entered and appropriate prizes were given each of the top three.

"Conservation is the saving of what mother nature has given us and it can't be done alone. We all must study the best ways to save our soil," says Miss French.

Conserving Soil Is Educational Problem

By MRS. HELEN KREYMBORG
Holt County Home Agent

"I hate dust."
"Why don't farmers keep their top soil at home?"
These are the irritations and questions that concern the average homemaker. However, if she would truly think "why don't farmers keep their top soil at home?" these questions would probably come. "Is it because they don't know how?" "Is it because they don't realize the loss?" and "Is it because they don't care?"

I'm sure farmers do realize there is a real economic loss when their top soil gets away whether it's by wind or water. And I'm just as sure they do care.

The answer of "don't know how" is also coupled with cost. Education or "know how" does cost money, but it is money well spent.

As all of us recall, there was a time when people suffered and died with small pox, but due to public education a case of small pox is a rare thing in this part of the United States. It would seem only logical that all educational effort can be coupled with the desire of people to save our top soil and the results can equal the curtailment of small pox.

"We all must learn about soil conservation, not only for our selves but for future generations," Mrs. Kreymborg concludes.

Sidney Mitchell Dies in Canada

John Grutsch received word Sunday of the death of his brother-in-law, Sidney Mitchell, over 80, in Stratford, Ont., Cana. Mr. Mitchell died that day. He had retired over a year ago after 50 years of employment by the White Packing company.

WE ARE PROUD TO BE A PART OF MINNEAPOLIS-MOLINE'S HISTORY OF PIONEERING ACHIEVEMENT...

First in Many Fields!

Whenever statistics are compiled, another big fact stands out. That's Minneapolis-Moline's history of pioneering achievement that has produced so many time-saving, work-saving, money-making "firsts" in the farm equipment field.

From the Moline Plow Company's first successful straddle-row cultivator of 1870 to MM's modern UNI-HARVESTOR that promises to rewrite the harvesting machinery pattern... MM has led in many important phases of farm machinery design and manufacture.

But, MM refuses to rest on yesterday's achievements. That's why you, the American farmer, can continue to expect the newest in proven, dependable farm machinery from Minneapolis-Moline. And, that's why you can be sure when you invest in MM Visionlined Tractors and Quality Machinery to lighten your work, to boost your production, to make more money from the land you farm.

FAMOUS MM "FIRSTS"
