Report from Washington

By Congressman Dave Marwin
Fourth District, Nebraska

I am greatly concerned with recent attempts by some liberals to "gag" our military and to prevent them from teaching their troops about the true nature of the Communist menace.

Senator J. W. Fulbright of Arkansas, a liberal and chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, has issued a memorandum which calls for muzzling any military commanders who have conservative views and believe in teaching anti-Communism. This memorandum has been severely criticized by Senators Barry Goldwater (Republican) and Strom Thurmond (Democrat) and other national leaders. Senator Carl Curtis of Nebraska, for instance, has labeled it "an effort to curb any indoctrination by the military of its active and reserve personnel and civilians with what can best be termed 'right-wing' policies."

As your Congressman from the Fourth District, I am proud to be identified with such "right-wing" policies, which are those of the vast majority of our conservative Fourth District voters. I am not ashamed of being anti-Communist nor of being concerned about the socialistic trend our nation is taking. I am ashamed of leaders in Congress who will not recognize it — and who try to muzzle those who do recognize it.

The Administration is holding back on filling the 95 Federal judgeships, 73 of which were added by Congress earlier this year. President Kennedy said that the 73 judges were needed because of the tremendous backlog of cases in the Federal courts. If that was true when the bill was passed, it is surely true now — and, yet, only 10 names have been submitted in the past two months to fill those 73 vacancies.

This isn't too difficult to understand when you consider what a power weapon judgeships are in getting Congressmen to vote the way the Administration desires. There will undoubtedly be many appointments made after the Kennedy Foreign Aid Bill is voted upon.

The House Education and Labor Committee, of which I am a member, recently reported out the Youth Employment Opportunity Act of 1961. This Act provides for on-the-job training and the reestablishment of the Youth Conservation Corps, which is the same as the old Civilian Conservation Corps set up during the thirties. The price tag for the three-year program is estimated at $366 million. President Kennedy in his recent address to the nation concerning the Berlin crisis stated " . . . meanwhile, to make certain that the current deficit is held to a safe level, we must keep down all expenditures not thoroughly justified in budget requests." I agreed completely with the President in this regard and feel that no new programs, such as encompassed in this bill, should be approved by the Congress.

Recent visitors from the Fourth District include Mr. and Mrs. Dean W. Fleming and Mrs. L.G. Fleming, Atkinson.
