O'NEILLITE NEW VICE-PRESIDENT

Dewey C. Schaffer Named
Officer of Nebraska
Stock Growers

Dewey C. Schaffer, well-known O'Neill stockman and rancher, Saturday was elected to the vice-presidency of the Nebraska Stock Growers' association. Annual convention of the group was held at Alliance.

New president is J. H. Vinton, of Gordon, who succeeds C. R. Watson, of Alliance, who had served for 2 years.

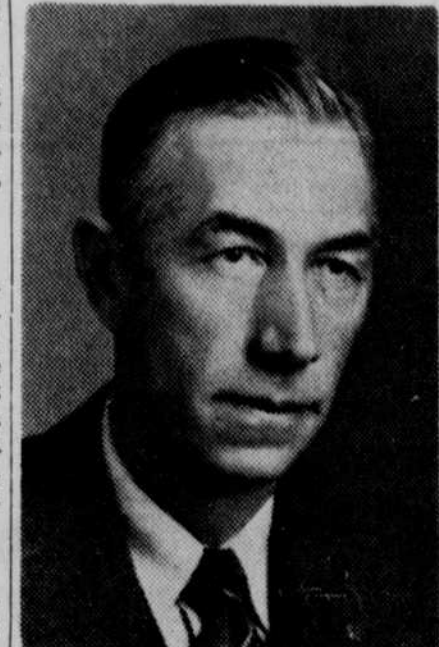

Schaffer had been a director of the organization for several years and in April arranged for a regional meeting of the group in O'Neill.

The delegates picked South Sioux City as the site of the 1951 convention.

Rep. A. L. Miller, Nebraska Republican, told the closing session that America "should never have crop surpluses" because there "are too many starving people in the world."

Miller told the cattlemen that stopping starvation was an effective way to stop communism.

Miller predicted that the international tariff meeting in September will result in lower agriculture tariffs. He said we are now importing agricultural products that are on our own surplus list.

The association approved resolutions which: Urged association members to combat the "socialistic trend" in this country.

Opposed the Brannan farm plan.

Approved Gov. Val Peterson's highway program.

Opposed an internal revenue department proposal to make gains from the sale or use of breeding cattle taxable as regular rather than capital gains.

Commended the Fort Robinson, Nebr., cattle research center project.

Opposed proposed changes in the rules for grading beef carcasses.

Commended the livestock loss prevention board, the national livestock meat board and the American Meat institute for their advertising programs.
