NORTH OF STUART—The community picnic supper held at the Cleveland church basement and sponsored by the Cleveland Clackers project club was attended by an estimated hundred people.

The club showed hand work that was done by members in their project work.

An outstanding exhibit was Corrine Sweet's shellcraft work of pins, earrings and other costume jewelry.

The 4-H club members exhibited the work they had done in classes through the summer.

After supper the young folks played outdoor games, sponsored by Mrs. James Allyn and Mrs. Herbert Sweet, while the parents spent the evening in visiting.

"GASOLINE BUGGY" Phone Service?

In the interest of good telephone service the Northwestern Bell Telephone Company is helping farmer-owned companies in the communities and adjoining rural areas we serve to recondition their lines.

In the past few years many of these lines have been improved—some of which had had very little attention since they were built years ago. Telephoning over them was something like trying to get along with a gasoline buggy or obsolete and worn out farm equipment.

To farmers who own their telephone lines . . . Have you inspected your plant recently? Is it in good condition? Is your service O.K.?

We offer to help you—

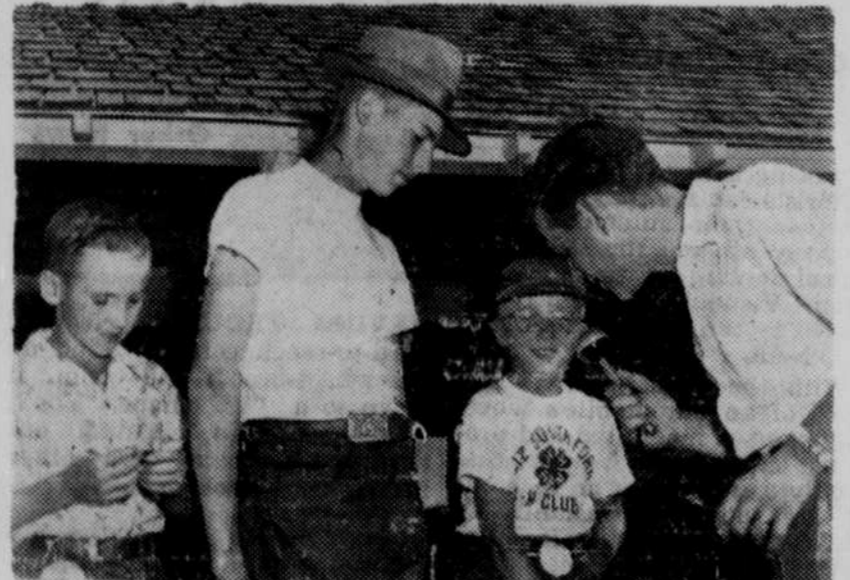

1. Inspect your lines.
2. Train your maintenance men.
3. Engineer and lay out your plant.
4. Supervise construction of your lines

If you are part owner of farm telephone lines and receive switching service from one of our exchanges, just call on our manager.

The "Voice of the Frontier's" special events unit visited the fair at Chambers on Thursday and by means of tape recording interviewed Donald Fullerton, of Amelia; Dale Garwood, of Amelia, and Gary Holcomb, of Chambers. Interviews and fair news made up a portion of Saturday morning's regular "Voice" program at 9:45 a. m. Fullerton helped present an REA demonstration and entered a stocker-feeder calf. Garwood won grand champion laurels with his stocker-feeder Angus calf 5-months-old. Garwood said he spent 4½ hours per week caring for his calf. Gary's sewing entries included a dust cloth and a pin cushion. He's fond of using a sewing machine. Left-to-right: Fullerton, Holcomb and George Hammond.

Gary Holcomb, 11, son of Mr. and Mrs. Leroy Holcomb, of Chambers, proudly displays his Hereford stocker-feeder calf, "Gabbie Hayes," which won a grand championship award. Master Gary also entered a hog and some sewing, which captured the interest of the "Voice of the Frontier's" announcer, George Hammond (above).
