WHO'S Crippled?

Dr. A. L. Miller

A hunting accident which ended an outstanding career in medicine and threatened to make him a helpless cripple for the rest of his life didn't stop Dr. Arthur Louis Miller of Kimball, Neb. He gave up his practice, but is now successfully serving his fourth term as Congressman from Nebraska in the United States House of Representatives.

Because he overcame a severe physical handicap which would have discouraged most people, the Nebraska Society for Crippled Children presented Congressman Miller with the "Who's Crippled?" award at its annual meeting in Omaha (Oct. 16). This monthly award is conferred by the National Society for Crippled Children and Adults through its state affiliates. It is awarded persons like Dr. Miller who, in their determination to live happy, useful lives, have outwitted a physical handicap.

At the peak of his medical career in 1934, Dr. Miller was on a hunting trip, when his shotgun accidentally discharged. His feet were so badly injured that both were amputated. Dr. Miller realized his career as a surgeon was finished because he could no longer stand on his feet to perform an operation. He had $40,000 on his books, but that Christmas he sent receipted bills to all his patients, closed up his office and took a trip around the world.

When he returned home, Dr. Miller decided to go into politics and began preparing for his new career as carefully as he had pursued his medical education.

Before being elected to Congress

In 1942, he served as mayor of both Bushnell and Kimball, Neb. He was a member of the Unicameral Legislature, directed the state health department and the Nebraska Medical Association and became a fellow of the American College of Surgeons. He also headed the Kimball American Legion Post and was a member of the state athletic commission.

During his political career, he has lost only one campaign and that was when he ran for governor in 1940. In Congress, he has served as a member of the appropriations, public lands and District of Columbia committees.

Congressman Miller confesses that the biggest hurdle he ever conquered took place when he decided to take up hunting again after his accident. He trembled every time he saw a gun. He was determined to overcome his fear and, as a result, today hunting is his favorite sport.

Dr. Miller's amazing drive since he became handicapped is no surprise to those who knew the obstacles he surmounted to gain his medical education. Born in 1892 in Plainview, Pierce County, Neb., he taught school to earn enough to attend the University of Nebraska and Creighton University in Omaha.

Finding job opportunities scarce, he decided to try his luck in Chicago, arriving there with $50 in his pocket. He waited tables, worked on elevated trains, clerked in a shoe store, worked the night shift at Cook County Hospital and became a professional wrestler, participating in about 50 matches. He received his M.D. degree from Chicago's Loyola University in 1918.

Congressman Miller serves as a shining example of the American way of life. He dramatically demonstrated that, if given a chance, a handicapped person can lead a full and rewarding life.
