Jimmy Larson, 9-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert E. Larson: "Let's see — a cowboy suit."

Mickey Snyder, 9-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Dan Snyder: "I don't know. Shall I think right now? Mom, get the catalogue. A basketball and a net."

Linda Jean Long, 2½-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Noal E. Long: "A buggy, a doll and some doll clothes. That's all, bye, bye!"

Rose Marie Walter, 3-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Martin Walter: "A dolly, a snowsuit and most of all a Christmas tree and something for the dog, Bill—a bone."

Larry Gilg, 6-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Francis Gilg: "A cowboy suit and a little jeep that will shine the lights and a little candy truck with candy in it. I saw it in the catalogue. I have a little Santa Claus mask."

Michael McManus, 4-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward McManus: "I'm going to get a long train for Christmas with a cauboose on it. Pidge is going to get a doll buggy. She is there washing her hands. It's grease."

Michelle Lower, almost 4-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Lower: "Do you want to know what I want for Christmas? A buggy, a doll house, what else do I want? (To her daddy.) I don't know what else — oh yes, new dishes for Christmas."

Terry Tomjack . . . bubble thing and goggles.

Paul Jacobson, almost 4-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. M. E. Jacobson: "A big road grader."

Joseph ("Joe") Gilg, 3-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Francis Gilg: "Some toys."

Mary Gonderinger, 3-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Norman Gonderinger: "A doll house, doll clothes, but we have some clothes and we have a dolly, too."

Margaret Donohoe, 7-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Donohoe: "A little table and a nurse's set and a doll that has hair."

Kathy Gallagher, 3-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John R. Gallagher: "A doll buggy. Wouldn't that be pretty? A bed for the dollies. I've got some more dollies — three dollies. And a telephone. Will you come and see it?"

Kathy Brown, 2½-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Brown: "A doll buggy. I'm a good girl."

Jean Lohaus . . . a cowboy suit.

Johnny DeWitt, 3-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. John DeWitt: "A record player, ball gun. Bobby wants a rocking horse. Bobby is my brother."

Dickie Green, 6-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Lyle M. Green: "Some trains, a blackboard and some cars. My sister wants a tricycle."

Nancy Krause, almost 4-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Milton M. Krause: "I haven't figured it out yet. (A little laugh.) I would like to have a doll dresser, table, cradle and a set of dishes. That's all I want."

Charles ("Chuck") Froelich, 7½-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. William J. Froelich: "Just anything will do."

Bobby Gallagher, about 2-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. John R. Gallagher: "A bed, telephone, candy."

Every week we use two letters from readers and award each one a three-months' subscription to The Frontier. Such a prize is well worth trying for — and it's easier than you think.

Write about anything you like. You can send two or three good seasonal recipes and include a couple of good household hints and you'll have a good letter on paper.

Send it to Mrs. Blanche Pease, The Frontier Woman, Atkinson, Neb.

You can grow old faster from hardening of the heart than hardening of the arteries.

Few of us are too busy to talk about how busy we are. City folks just can't understand how we can stand to live in little towns where there's nothing to see. They don't know what a lot there is to hear.

Read a magazine article last week that said that eating can kill you. Don't look now but so can not eating.
