Letters from Mission Workers Read—

STUART—The Womens Society of the Community church met at the home of Mrs. Walter Gill on Thursday afternoon, January 4. There were 28 members and visitors present. A missionary program was presented by Mrs. Z. X. Marshall and Mrs. Noma Hall. Letters were read from several missionaries, among which was one from Dr. Esther Morse, of Hainan, China, and Miss Helen McClurg, of Sitka, Alaska, who formerly was from this locality.

Mrs. Hall gave the history of Iraq and told of present conditions where the Bagdad school for girls is located.

The program was finished with a quiz in which everyone took part. A lunch was served with Mrs. Ina Myers and Mrs. C. R. Myers as assistant hostesses.

The Modern Peter at the Dyke

The brown of prairieland lies today under a white covering. Winter's first snow to a depth of eight inches fell silently on the slumbering world the night of January 1. Wheat growers welcome the snow, nature students thrill at the undefiled purity, boys drag out their sleds, little children roll in its soft embrace and the Old Timer feels coming over him the memory of a span of bay steppers, lines in his hands as he draws them over the dash of a cutter, sleigh bells jingling in the frosty air, and the village belle wrapped in furs by his side, while an envious swain looks on as they glide by.

Because of friends capable of influencing appointments, the lame duck gets a better job than the successful candidate. Whom the voters reject, the politicians take under their wing.

She had experienced many thrilling moments. Great crowds had been touched to the quick by her sweet singing. But when Marian Andersen, the negro singer, was asked what was her greatest moment, she replied: "It was the day I went home and told my mother that she did not have to take in washings any more." There is something fine in that which transcends even her unmatched talent. One who could charm thousands with her sweet voice and not be swept into the stellar realms of popularity but think of that black mother at home toiling over a wash tub has a heart to match her voice.

Senator McKnight by the second day of the legislative session had tossed 17 bills into the assembly line hoping for their acceptance by the body of assembled Nebraska statesmen. Changing, revamping, rooting out and substituting Nebraska statutory provisions goes merrily on at each successive session.

The gaily colored and haughty magazines, claiming millions of readers, go stale on the news stands and revert to oblivion. The home town weekly goes into a few thousand words and is pretty well worn to tatters by the time all hands have access to its informative pages.

The 8-year-old hearing his 2-year-old brother cry after a fall while at play, thus philosophized: "That's the way in the world; you have a little fun and a lot of trouble."

The cry of witch hunt does a lot to nullify the efforts of those officials who seek to eliminate spies and undesirable from both industry and official jobs.

The gent who borrowed the book "I Improve Your Memory" at a city library brought it back six years later.

Prairieland Talk—

Some State Senators Have Yet to Learn They're Representatives of People

By ROMAINE SAUNDERS

LINCOLN—The legislature is at work of law making and budget fixing again.

Frank Nelson, who is one of two or three senators who were on hand early Tuesday, January 2, when the session was organized starting at noon. Senator Nelson feels that in view of the national situation Nebraska should go slow about adding to the tax burdens and will maintain his position for economy in the administration of state business. Here comes a gentleman from the west end of the state proposing to set aside the will of the voters and reenact the gas tax.

Romaine Saunders

Some of the local statesmen have not yet grasped the truth that it is what the voters feel is best for the state rather than what individual senators think about it. They have yet to learn they are representatives of the people, not promoters of personal interests.

Hugo Srb, who has functioned as clerk since memory faileth, serves in that capacity again. A Bourbon flavor invaded the state house for a few hours with the seating of Mr. Caldwell as attorney-general to function over one night, probably his last chance at the job.

Starting with two members in Akron, O., in 1935, Alcoholics Anonymous now counts 110,000 members. . . . There are two dairy cows to each 13 persons. . . . Red Cross wants $85,000,000, an increase of $18,000,000 over last year. . . . Officials census returns show a population of 150,697,361, and rats are believed to out number humans. . . . There are 2,344,509 in colleges and universities of the country, a drop of 187,809 from the previous year enrollment. . . . From the pituitary gland at the base of the hog's brain scientists extract ACTH, for the treatment of arthritis and other ailments. . . . Sheep ranchers in Australia mark up a loss of a half million sheep yearly from the native killers known as dingos, a wolf-like dog.

John Kusti Paasikivi, the 80-year-old president of Finland, is one statesman the Russians can neither frighten nor bluff. He can give the nations lessons in handling the Muscovites. And he is about the only one of Uncle Sam's debtors who promptly pays up.

The court said: "The motion, in its factual setting, is completely without validity." That's the judicial way of saying, "Tisn't so!"
