A contributor to a Los Angeles paper, "Mrs. F. A.," adds a comedy note to the tragic reality that after nearly six years at monu-mental financial outlay and oratory that well neigh chokes the Hudson river nothing has been settled of the original intent of the organization.

"Mrs. F. A's." letter in an early February issue of the Heraldpit sound a Express says:

"I am wondering if it is possible that a great pest of our com, mon house flies have taken over the United Nations. I am prompted by reading that science has discovered that the common house fly spends 98 percent of his time flapping his wings."

Deadwood had a Calamity Jane, Omaha a Fainting Bertha, the Cherokee Strip a Belle Starr. Out here they have a Cactus Kate, a hard-billen am azon from Copper Canyon who seems to have been buffeted by fate until the glowing aspirations of other days have died in the gloomy shadows of disappointed hopes. Four high school kids, 17 and 18 years of age, sons of average American citizens, wanted a thrill. They thought a wrecked fast train, with engine and coaches piled up and broken human bodies would give them this thrill. Rocks and timbers were piled on a Southern Pacific track ascending the San Fernando valley and the thrill seekers waited. A slow freight was the first train then along. The engineer saw the obstruction in time and pulled the brakes. What is to be done with those boys has not been determined at this writing. If it is a thrill they are after I suggest loading them into a plane without delay and flying them direct to the most dangerous zone in

A block up the street from where I have holed up until early March when I expect to return to prairieland, ground has been leveled for the erection of 38 new houses. Erection is hardly the word. The houses of the day here are spread out rather than rising skyward. The older and more stately homes of a fading generation reared their roofs into the sunlight above the fronded palms. Much building is now underway of houses "for sale," crowding to the mountain sides.
