The Frontier Woman—

Boys' Wagon Makes Moving Clothes Basket Easier on Back — and Quicker, Too!

By BLANCHE SPANN PEASE

Hi there, all you friendly folk! March! — almost! I hope next week's weather will be nice for those who have to move. Having lived in the same spot for 17 years, it has been a long time since I moved, but I have not forgotten all the trials of moving day — and the days that follow — by any means. Some day I hope I can move into a new house.

Meantime, our house may be old, battered and myself a little bent from living in it, but it is our own and paid for and even all of its drawbacks have almost become desirable from long association.

Easter is approaching. If you can't have a new outfit, have your old one cleaned and pressed. Maybe you can brighten it up with some new accessories. A bright red blouse can do wonders for your old gray suit — and it will do things for a navy blue suit, too. One of the smartest colors to go with a grey suit this spring is the various shades of lavender. Another shade for accessories that does things for grey is yellow.

Any of these three shades will brighten up your black outfits, too, you know, but be sure they will go with other colors in your wardrobe before you buy them. It is poor judgment to buy clothes that will not blend in with colors of other clothes in your wardrobe.

When buying a new suit remember that you are not buying it just for this season alone. A good suit should last you from two to five years and if you select a conservative cut, it will not go out of style in that length of time. Never buy a dress, a suit or outfit just for one season. Buy it for a longer length of time, pay a bit more and wear it longer, and you'll be better dressed in the long run.

2 Babies in a Year Keeps Mother 'Always Busy' — "Always Busy" win some of our three-months subscriptions today. The other goes to "Mrs. P.", of Atkinson.

Dear Blanche and Readers: Every week I resolve I must write that letter to The Frontier Woman. Before I know it, it's Thursday again and no letter written. There have been some very good letters lately, I especially enjoy the ones written by busy mothers with little tots.

That's my dish at the present time. I used to think I was busy when I had just one or two. Now, with the last two babies in the same year on top of all the rest of the work, I just wonder what I did with my time before.

Of course, there's no needlework or rug making, just glad to get a little necessary sewing done along with the usual patching.

Still, I can't say there's ever a dull moment around here, as the yearling keeps things pretty much in a merry-go-round most of the time.

Little sister is a big help in so many ways, still she needs attention, too, and the little brother does make a mess with her dolls and play things.

Have found a few short cuts that might help some others. When taking off the little folks socks, I like to pin them together, not so much danger of getting lost in the machine. Can just throw them over the line. Like to do this with the boys' anklets, too, when I don't run out of safety pins.

I put my basket of clothes on the boys' little wagon, easier on the back and quicker to pull along the line than being lifting the basket. I have my clothespin bag on a hanger and keep sliding it down the line ahead of me or, if it is too windy, just take out a couple handfolds and lay them in the basket, easy to grab a pin as you reach for the clothes.

Anyone planning on buying a new electric iron, I suggest buying a steam iron. That does away with your sprinkling of clothes, then if you don't have time to do all the ironing, no worry about clothes mildewing.

Hope no one else had the luck I did of using shellac on their wallpaper above the stove to keep the paper from grease spotting and the hint said you could just wipe your paper clean. I thought the idea sounded splendid. Having part of a roll of paper left, we tore off the spotted paper above the stove and papered. Then I applied the clear shellac. But alas it just looked like one big grease spot for the following week. Oh, it isn't just babies that make mother's hair get gray!

When you feel tired and all in, have you ever tried combing your hair vigorously? Somehow it gives you renewed energy and might add to one's looks also.

Time to get some dinner ready so just an idea for a quick but good salad. Using lime gelatin, add a can of white cherries cut in squares and serve on lettuce. "ALWAYS BUSY."

She Put Castoria in the Cake — Dear Blanche: You have been asking for letters, so I'll try and help you out again. Today is Ash Wednesday and we will start attending mid-week Lenten services on Wednesday nights. I really believe more people should attend church during Lenten season and learn more about the Great Man who died for all our sins.

This morning I was thinking of the men and women who didn't have little children in the household. We have three, ages 5, 3, and 1, and believe me there isn't a dull moment from the time we get up till I tuck the last one in at night. Others don't know what they are missing.

For instance, awhile back I was busy stirring up a cake so we could go to a party and either my mind must have been on the children or something else because as I reached for the vanilla, I got the castoria instead and had a teaspoonful put in before I realized what I had used.

Well, the cake turned out pretty good and we didn't go to the party. So we ate it and couldn't tell the difference.

Anyway these little folks of ours are pretty nice and we wouldn't trade places with anyone, when they're sick we try to make them well, and when they're happy, we are happy too.

During this Lenten season I have a recipe which I like to use. It's very simple, just cook the right amount of macaroni that it takes for your family and while it's cooking, I use a fourth of a pound of cream cheese and melt it in a pan on the stove. When melted I add a little milk and salt and pepper and pour over the macaroni. It's good served with mashed potatoes and a green vegetable.
