8 'Superiors' Are Won in Contest

The district high school speech contest was held Friday at Atkinson. The O'Neill high school speech department and the Theban club entered in five separate divisions. These contestants were grouped in the class A division. Three of the entries merited "superior" ratings, one entry earned an "excellent," and one entry received a "good."

The contestants, along with their selections which rated "superior," were: Barbara Bennett, "The Crucifixion," by Lew Wallace; Joellyn Backhaus, interpretative poetry reading; one-act play, "High Windows," by Verne Powers.

Two members of the play cast were awarded "superior" ratings for their individual performances. They were Lois Harder as "Linda Norton," and Leah Serck as "Emily Winthrop." The others in the cast received ratings of "excellent." They were Don Petersen, Donna Crabb and John Bowen.

The rating of "excellent" went to Priscilla Holsclaw for her reading of an excerpt from the play, "The Importance of Being Earnest," by Oscar Wilde.

Alice Knepper received a "good" rating for her interpretative oratory selection, "Who's to Blame?" by Zelta J. Ryan.

On April 6, the OHS speech department will take the one-act play, "High Windows," to Kearney to enter competition with plays from other cities and towns throughout the state. The individual entry at Kearney will be Barbara Bennett.

Five out of seven entries from the St. Mary's academy speech department received "superior" ratings at the district speech contest.

The students who received the "superior" ratings were: Lorraine Simonson, humorous reading, "The Soldier Lover"; Marde Birmingham, dramatic reading, "My Ever-Long Creation"; Jack Carney, radio newscast, and Mary Lois Kelly, poetry reading.

Miss Birmingham's selection was written by John O'Neill, a graduate of St. Mary's academy, now a freshman at Creighton university. The judges expressed special praise for the selection.

The play, "Gray Bread," presented by the students, also received a "superior" rating. The cast included: Mary J. Jarman, "Solda"; Bernadette Hynes, "Ri-ja"; Mary Lois Kelly, "Yolande," and Marde Birmingham, "Motka." This play has a peasant theme and was first produced at the Michigan State Teachers' college.
