

The Frontier Woman —

Things You May Hear on Party Line Sometimes Prove to Be Educational

By BLANCHE SPANN PEASE

Hi there, all you busy, bustling folk. Got the garden in? Got the glads all planted? Is the ground warm enough for you to put in those dahlia tubers? Wait until the ground's warm, you know. Dahlias should never be planted until then.

You mothers of new babies—do you have trouble with cod liver oil stains on the baby's clothes? Well, let me slip you a brilliant idea as to how to prevent those stains. Just give the baby his cod liver oil after he's had his bath and before you put his clothes on. Then, if any gets spilled, it's easier to wash it off the baby—easier than to get the stains out of lovely baby clothes!

Which reminds me that whenever The Frontier doesn't get out on Atkinson route 4 on Thursdays (when it's supposed to) there is a girl on our line who says, "Well, Cal Stewart must have been walking the floor last night with that new baby again!" Grin.

The things you can hear on a party telephone line are often very educational!

Are there some good bits of the plastic table cloth left over? You might want to stitch them up into washable bibs for the baby. Another idea for baby bibs is the good parts of worn Turkish towels. Unworn parts of Turkish towels also make very serviceable hot noisers, if stitched 2 or 3 thick.

Putting a towel bar on the back of the baby's high chair is sometimes a good idea. You can keep a wash cloth, hand towel, and the baby's bib on the bar. No more hunting for those needed articles.
