By BLANCHE SPANN PEASE

Oh goodness me, the weather is hot! Right when there is canning to do, and you have to have the stove going. These are the days I like to serve partly cold meals.

Forecast today was for a hundred in the shade so I planned a lunch of baked ham, buttered corn, cherry-pecan gelatin salad, and so I wouldn't have to cook potatoes at noon. I made a big dish of potato salad, enough for dinner and supper both. I baked pies in early morning and kept them chilled in the refrigerator. Yesterday I pulled a "foodea" that might interest some of the rest of you. In a baked pie shell, I put prepared chocolate pudding mix, but I used a half cup of strong coffee in place of that much milk. For a topping on a pie I used marshmallow creme. You can buy marshmallow creme in jars and keep it in the refrigerator until it is all used up.

Topping the creme I put crushed pecans that I crushed with a rolling pin. About 2 tablespoons is enough for a pie, that's the measurement before crushing.

Marshmallow creme is nice to use on prepared pudding mix which you use in sherberts, too. A teaspoonful is plenty for each serving. It is stiff when you spoon it out (keep it in the refrigerator) but top the pudding with it a half hour before serving, and by then it will run down to decorate the pudding.

You can also use it between graham crackers, as a filling, and as topping for various other kinds of desserts. It's handy to have around, decorates and garnishes, particularly in that pinch when you have no cream to whip.

An apple nut pudding is a delicacy you'll enjoy serving your family and I'll guarantee you they'll call for seconds.

You need 3/4 cup sugar, 1 well beaten egg, 1/2 cup enriched flour, 1/2 teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon baking powder, 1 cup finely chopped tart apples, 1/2 cup walnuts, chopped, and 1 teaspoon almond extract. Gradually add sugar to egg, beating until sugar is dissolved. Add sifted dry ingredients, stir in remaining ingredients. Pour into greased 8 inch square pan. Bake in moderate oven of 350 F. 35 to 40 minutes. Serve with whipped cream.

A Gypsy Housewife Wins Subscription—

Dear Mrs. Pease: This is the time of year when writing can easily be pushed to the background for most of us are busy at other things.

Sometimes I think we complain outwardly about housecleaning when inwardly we enjoy it. Hard work? Yes, of course, but after all we chose homemaking as our life's work, didn't we? We expected to work hard to make our job a success. When the last slip cover is on and the last curtain hangs fresh and clean at the shining windows, and we sit back and admire our freshly scrubbed, painted, papered or whatever rooms, the satisfaction of accomplishment more than pays for the sore muscles we acquired doing the job and if we worked hard enough a few of those surplus pounds we acquired during the lazy winter days may have vanished with the collected smudges on walls and woodwork.

Enough about housecleaning. I am one of the lucky ones who has the job well done.

The last paint brush is clean—ed and put away at our house and from listening on the party line. I think most of the neighbor ladies are putting on the finishing touches, or done, too.

Have any of your readers ever thought of the "traveling" you can do right in your own home if you just take the time as you look through your magazines to clip the coupon blanks for free travel folders and send them in? Some of these travel folders are very entertaining and educational and most states will send them out free or at the most for a stamp, or the required postage for the folder.

Whether you plan to travel or not, if you like to read about the scenic places of these United States, get a supply of these folders and plan your trip even if it is only a mythical one. You'll find lots of interesting places to read about and you'll find yourself slipping a few dollars into the old sugar bowl to make that trip come true. Unless you're one of those people who dislike traveling, which I definitely am not, I think my ancestors were gypsies for I love to travel. A trip of any kind is a real event to me and some day when world affairs are settled, I hope to see the places I've traveled to with the aid of travel folders.
