Enjoys Tito's Old Retreat

Cpl. Dwayne Borg, son of Mr. and Mrs. Axel Borg, of O'Neill, has written the following letter to his parents from Japan:

11 September, 1951
Dear Mom and Dad,
I just came back from my 3-day pass yesterday and was pretty tired out but had thoroughly enjoyed myself. Maurstad and I went up to Yosi lake and camped out there for 3 days. We rented a motor boat for $30 for the 3 days which was a pretty good deal, I thought. We made our camp down close to the lake and not far from the town so that we could go in and get our water supply all the time. One good thing about the service over here is that they issue us plenty of clothes and equipment for such occasions as that. We took along our own pup tents, canteens, blankets, carbines, and cooking utensils. We got a bunch of "C" rations from the mess hall, enough to last us for our stay. I also took along my radio which can be converted to a portable so you can see that in all we were prepared for just about anything.

The first day we camped in the morning, ate lunch and took our carbines and started off on a hike up the mountains. Boy, the country up there is really pretty. It seemed so nice and peaceful after being around these thousands and thousands of Japanese every day. Every once in a while we came across some game to shoot at but all we ever killed was a bunch of rabbits and one bobcat. We saw a couple of deer but never got close enough to get a good shot at them.

After we got back to camp that night we sat around the fire we had used for supper and listened to the radio and talked over old times back in Nebraska.

I was just about really homesick that night for the first time since I have been over here. I guess it was mostly because ev-night. I was just about ready to try my luck at swimming the ocean that night. Ha.

When we got up in the morning we were still a little too stiff and tired to go through the mountains that day so we took the boat down to the city and picked up one of the Japanese guides to show us points of interest around the lake. We started up the lake cryinging was so nice and quiet on top of thinking of it all that and went about 7 miles up the shore line, stopping once in a while when the guide would show us different statues placed supposedly to worship the gods, etc., developed from their buddhism religion. The main point of interest for the day was when he showed us the place where Tojo was supposed to have been born and raised. It was a well kept place back in the mountains away from any place where other people lived at all. He said that some
