Time will call this her greatest role. The star whose name brings to memory the finest successes of the screen. And now "Annie Laurie" gives Miss Gish a character portrayal of intense heart appeal.

The pathos of "La Boheme," the courage of "The Scarlet Letter"—are here in the stirring story of a bonnie highland lass to whom love showed the way through the turbulent strife and wild adventure of warring clans.

E. J. COLSON, A SALESMAN KILLED IN CAR ACCIDENT

E. J. Colson, 33, 617 South Nineteenth street, Omaha, motor truck salesman for the past five years of the International Harvester company, was instantly killed Wednesday when a car in which he was riding with H. A. Schmode, garageman of Norfolk, turned over in the ditch three and one-half miles west of Clearwater. Schmode was not seriously injured.

The story connected with the tragedy seems to be that Colson and Schmode had driven from Ainsworth during the night; Schmode had driven as far as O'Neill and Colson decided to drive while Schmode went to sleep in the rear seat of the large Cadillac. It appears from the tracks in the road three and one-half miles west of Clearwater the driver must have gone to sleep for a second as the left front wheel went down off the grade and then the car seemed to have gone back diagonally across the road and turned over in the ditch on the right side of the highway and was standing on all four wheels. Mr. Schmode does not remember of crawling out of the wreckage; when he regained consciousness he was a short distance from the car and at once released Mr. Colson who was lying under the running board. The car was burning at that time.

Mr. Colson is quite well known in O'Neill and his many O'Neill friends are deeply grieved over the tragedy. The remains of Mr. Colson were taken to Omaha Thursday where funeral arrangements will be made.
