

The BABY

No mother in this enlightened age would give her baby something she did not know was perfectly harmless, especially when a few drops of plain Castoria will right a baby's stomach and end almost any little ill. Puffiness and fever, too; it seems no time until everything is serene.

That's the beauty of Castoria; its gentle influence seems just what is needed. It does all that castor oil might accomplish, without shock to the system. Without the evil taste. It's delicious! Being purely vegetable, you can give it as often as there's a sign of colic; constipation; diarrhea; or need to aid sound, natural sleep.

Just one warning: It is genuine Fletcher's Castoria that physicians recommend. Other preparations may be just as free from all doubtful drugs, but no child of this writer's is going to test them! Besides, the book on care and feeding of babies that comes with Fletcher's Castoria is worth its weight in gold.

COLDS put extra burdens on our kidneys. When the kidneys slow up, impurities remain in the blood and are apt to make one tired and aching with headaches, dizziness and often nagging backache. A common warning is scanty or burning secretions.
Doan's Pills, a stimulant diuretic, increase the secretion of the kidneys and aid in the elimination of waste impurities. Are endorsed by users everywhere. Ask your neighbor!

Little Guatemala.
From the New York Central.
Of Guatemala, as of all Central American states, we are accustomed to think in terms of minute splashes of color on a jumbled map where the North American continent tapers to the Isthmus. Actually, Guatemala is by no means so minute as its size on the conventional small-scale maps would indicate; it is about the size of the state of New York, with a fifth of New York's population. It is the most northerly of the Central American states, lying next to Mexico, roughly square in shape, mountainous except for a small strip of land along the coast and with high plateaus that are healthful and fertile. Here coffee, sugar, bananas and tobacco are grown for export.

Guatemala is very old and very new. At one end of its civilization stand the old monoliths of the Quirigua ruins, whose inscriptions archaeologists have not yet succeeded in deciphering, but whose workmanship indicates that a highly developed culture flourished here at least 1,000 years before the discovery of America by Columbus. In sharp contrast with these honored relics stand a modern school system, a rapidly growing trade and a "progressive" government which is viewed with some concern by foreigners who regard all Latin-American nations as in duty bound to conform to our traditional conception of them as sleepy, lazy and politically indifferent. A little more than a year ago dispatches from Washington reported fear of a revolution following the December elections, but this revolution failed to materialize. In January the newly elected government offered to mediate in the Nicaraguan dispute which had led to American intervention. Guatemala is a near neighbor

Thought Farming.
From Christian Evangelist.
Farmer: Thought you said you had ploughed the 10-acre field?
Ploughman: No, I only said I was thinking about ploughing it.
Farmer: Oh, I see; you've merely turned it over in your mind.

of Nicaragua, and the blundering American policy of last winter did little for our prestige. Lindbergh flew recently to a country where our stock as a friendly neighbor has not been soaring lately.
He landed, when he landed in the capital of Guatemala, in a city situated 5,000 feet above the sea, surrounded by green hills and with the temperature of a spring day on Long Island. Good motor roads lead from this city to interesting ruins of the old Mayan civilization and to mountain ranges with high peaks. We shall now hear more of this country in the next five days than we have heard in the last five years. And in view of our provincial indifference toward the rest of our own continent, a little new knowledge of this sort will not do us any harm.

The Strauss Statue.
From Time.
Which Jew, by his services to the United States, deserves to be honored with a statue, was the question that the Jewish Tribune put to its readers. The decision gave the honor to Oscar Solomon Strauss (1850-1926), diplomat.
He was the friend and aid of four United States presidents. For Grover Cleveland he went to Turkey as United States minister; at Constantinople he protected the United States mission schools and colleges. For William McKinley he again went to Turkey as minister. William Howard Taft sent him there a third time, as ambassador. Meanwhile he had served as Theodore Roosevelt's secretary of commerce and labor. President Roosevelt appointed him a United States member to the Permanent Court of Arbitration at the Hague in 1902 and again in 1908; Woodrow Wilson repeated the appointment in 1912 and again in 1926. President Wilson found his advice and services great help in getting the Covenant of the League of Nations written into the Treaty of Versailles.

"Have you seen the picture 'Ben Hur'?" a Glen Elder flapper was asked yesterday.
"No, I won't go to see the movie. I once saw the real thing in Kansas City. The costumes were swell and I never will forget how scared I got when that Jew came in and demanded his pound of flesh."

Wherever Jews were harassed Mr. Strauss used his public power to defend them. He was pious in his religious observance, and always kept nailed to the door-posts of his homes a mezuzah, a small case containing the Israelish creed "Hear, oh Israel, the Lord is God, the Lord is One," together with appropriate verses from Deuteronomy.
Such a career, decided the Jewish Tribune readers, was statuesque. It deserved a memorial, and for that the magazine has started a campaign.
When the statue goes up it will be only the third statue publicly erected to a Jew in the United States. One of the others is in Manhattan, raised for Heinrich Heine, poet. The other is on the city hall square of Paterson, N. J., and honors Nathan Barnett, twice mayor of Paterson. Mr. Barnett began business in Paterson in 1855, four years after it was incorporated as a city. He prospered; became owner of silk mills; gave away his money—for a hospital, a nurses' home, a home for the aged, a perpetual fund to provide dowries for poor girls. Last week he was still living, 89 years old and a very sick man, whom his daughter was assiduously tending.
His Opportunity.
From London Opinion.
Victor—I suppose you wife listened in when you were broadcasting, Professor Twenty?
The Professor—She did, madam. And for the first time in nearly 30 years I had the pleasure of addressing her without interruption.

Law.
From the Toronto Mail and Empire.
There are more curious American laws than the Volstead act. For instance, professional boxing is legal in New York and Chicago. It is legal to take moving pictures of fights in either state. But it is not legal to exhibit in one state the moving pictures taken in another. This is not exactly sense, but it is split.
Defeated Himself.

Have Kidneys Examined By Your Doctor

Take Salts to Wash Kidneys if Back Pains You or Bladder Bothers

Flush your kidneys by drinking a quart of water each day, also take salts occasionally, says a noted authority, who tells us that too much rich food forms acids which almost paralyze the kidneys in their efforts to expel it from the blood. They become sluggish and weaken; then you may suffer with a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sours, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine gets cloudy, full of sediment, the channels often get sore and irritated, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night.

To help neutralize these irritating acids, to help cleanse the kidneys and flush off the body's urinous waste, get four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy here; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days, and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help flush and stimulate sluggish kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in the system so they no longer irritate, thus often relieving bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, cannot injure and makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink.
