The BABY

Why do so many, many babies of today escape all the little fretful spells and infantile ailments that used to worry mothers through the day, and keep them up half the night?

If you don't know the answer, you haven't discovered pure, harmless Castoria. It is sweet to the taste, and sweet in the little stomach. And its gentle influence seems felt all through the tiny system. Not even a distasteful dose of castor oil does so much good.

Fletcher's Castoria is purely vegetable, so you may give it freely, at first sign of colic; or constipation; or diarrhea. Or those many times when you just don't know what is the matter. For real sickness, call the doctor, always. At other times, a few drops of Fletcher's Castoria.

The doctor often tells you to do just that; and always says Fletcher's. Other preparations may be just as pure, just as free from dangerous drugs, but why experiment? Besides, the book on care and feeding of babies that comes with Fletcher's Castoria is worth its weight in gold!

Most Washington "Associations" Fakes, Says Senator Robinson

From New York Times News Report on Bill to Enforce Registration of Lobbyists.

Washington.—Ninety per cent. of the 300 to 400 organizations which he alleged exist in Washington to lobby for and against legislation are "fakes," Senator Caraway of Arkansas told the Senate, in favorably reporting from the Senate judiciary committee his bill to compel lobbyists to register with the secretary of the Senate and the clerk of the House.

The representatives of some organizations actually aided members of congress with information, the senator declared, but, on the other hand, there were some who "prey upon the credulity of those who have an interest in what congress shall do."

Describing some of the organizations here, he mentioned the "American Pedestrian Protective association," and asked: "Is that a school to teach people to dodge Ford cars, or outrun Buicks?"

Of the money collected by many associations he declared $99 out of each $100 usually went into the promoter's pocket. "One bright fellow," he said, "collected $60,000 from business men, and spent $58,000 in 'expenses.' Of course he spent it by taking it from their pockets and putting it in his own."

Denouncing the efforts of former members of congress to influence legislation, he said that any number of them "who were unable to take an interest in legislation when they were serving have become perniciously active in the interest of legislation later."

Senator Caraway intends to bring the bill up for consideration as soon as possible.

The committee report, submitted, while conceding that "men and women of high character" give "valuable information and are frequently helpful in dealing with public questions," declared that "there are a large number of people who pretend to represent 'associations' who are lobbyists pure and simple and in the most offensive sense of that term."

Stating that between 300 and 400 "alleged associations" were listed in the Washington telephone directory, the report continues:

"The larger number of these—90 per cent.—are fake associations organized for the sole purpose of profit.

"Ninety nine dollars out of every hundred that the public pays to these alleged associations go into the pockets of the promoters of these fake associations. It might be safely said outside of a dozen there is not a penny paid to these associations that is not worse than wasted."

The associations, the report asserted, "include fake agricultural associations, fake scientific associations, fake religious associations, fake temperance associations, fake associations in opposition to prohibition."

"Nearly every activity of the human mind has been capitalized by some grafter with 'headquarters' established for this activity in Washington," the report went on.

"Their only activity is to extract money from credulous people and put it into their own pockets.

"The fake associations so far outnumber those which are actually engaged in a legitimate effort to impart information that attention should be called to the situation."

"If these people may be compelled to put their names on record it will then purify the atmosphere their presence pollutes.

"It is also hoped that a few men who have been honored by their district or state with a tenure of office and who have lingered here and fattened off the hope entertained by some misguided people that by reason of the fact of their acquaintance they may be able to influence legislation, will likewise find their occupation destroyed."

An Untaught Artist.

From the Kansas City Star.
Three of the most impressive statues in Washington, Jackson on horseback, Washington at Princeton and the figure of Freedom mounting the dome of the capitol, were the work of Clark Mills, a shy, untutored sculptor whose only lessons were those he gave himself.

Mills, who was born 112 years ago, ran away from his uncle's home in Onondaga county, New York, at 13 years old, and it was not until seven years later that he began to think of art. His first piece of sculpture was a bust of John Calhoun, carved after months of effort. Amused at the thought that his clumsy hands might produce anything great, he nevertheless exhibited the completed marble, and an art jury awarded him a gold medal. The amazed youth at once received portrait commissions from several celebrities.

His first large order was for an equestrian statue of Andrew Jackson. It was unveiled in 1853, on the 38th anniversary of the Battle of New Orleans.

jeans. A vast crowd had gathered. Stephen Douglas, master of ceremonies, called upon Mills to speak. The young man, who never had spoken in public, could only point in silence at the veiled statue. His gesture was mistaken for a signal, and the veil was withdrawn, revealing the iron horse and rider for the first time. There was silence, then spontaneous, prolonged applause that eloquently presaged the fame and fortune attending the artist's later efforts.

The Oldest Living Thing

From the Detroit News.
The oldest living thing in the world today is a tree, perhaps one of the giant Sequoias of the Pacific coast, but just as likely an East African Baobab or some one of the giant cypresses of Mexico.

The age of trees can be determined definitely by sawing the trunk and counting the annual growth rings. The great age of some Sequoias already cut and counted, indicates that certain of the mammoth trees in the Calaveras Grove in northern California are not less than 5,000 years

Ahead of the Game.

From the Wall Street Journal.
Five-year-old Freda came marching home from Sunday school, carrying a small paper bag half full of chocolates, which she flaunted in the startled eyes of the family.
"Freda!" exclaimed her mother, on beholding the chocolates. "Wherever did you get those?" She had given her daughter sixpence for the collection, and suspected the worst had occurred.

Freda looked up in great surprise. "I bought them with the sixpence you gave me," she said. "The minister met me at the door and got me in for nothing."

old. But some of the Baobabs apparently are of about the same age and the famous cypress near Oaxaca, Mexico, is said to have lived 6,000 years.

The biggest of the Sequoias is about 30 feet in diameter while the Oaxaca cypress measures 41 feet, through the trunk. There is no way to determine the exact age without cutting the tree, since rate of growth varies markedly even among trees of the same species.

SPRING FANTASY

The winter's drear monotony is past, And plants are breaking upward through the snow.
I hear the waters, rushing, tumbling fast,
And winter wheat is sprouting, row on row.

I would be free as bluebirds on the wing,
I would away to meet the breathless morn.

If you were at my side to laugh and sing,
And hand in hand to watch the day be born.

Across the bounding azure hills to fly,
Nor stop for such a little thing as sleep;
But when the sun-warmed clouds roll softly high,
Heads nestled close, to slumber long and deep.

And then at gath'ring eve I'll hold your hand,
And gaze into the depths of your blue eyes,
And there I'll read the answer and command—
And I'll obey, and love shall spring surprise.

And as this verse is penned on Wednesday eve,
The weatherman looks at his charts askance,
The sifting snow drifts slowly up his sleeve,
And winter wheat just hasn't got a chance.

Adopts Britain's Policy.

From the Boston Transcript.
Paris is wondering what Mr. Kellogg means by his announcement that the United States is willing to enter into an agreement with all other powers to abolish submarines. Mr. Kellogg's fellow citizens of the United States are likely to feel and express the same wonder. Certainly the announcement appears to be—though we cannot for a moment suppose that it is intended to be—an affront to the French republic at the very moment when the United States is consummating with that republic a beautiful arrangement for eternal amity. Why should the United States appear to be just coming out from behind the British thicket in time to sign the treaty with France? And why should the United States just at this moment enter the field as the proponent of a policy that no country wants except Great Britain—which is absolutely impossible of general acceptance?

We wonder. And we also wonder why Secretary Kellogg should in such an off-hand manner assume that the American people are willing to abandon a means of defense to which our two ocean coast, and our purely defensive policy as regards the subject of warfare among the nations, clearly commit us. America has no thought of warfare except as a means of defense, and the current and effective weapons of defense we must keep in our hands.

Keep It Up

From the Wall Street Journal.
The telephone rang long and loud. Henpek took up the receiver as if he didn't care whether school kept or not.
"Hello. That you, Henpek?" yelled an excited voice at the other end.
Hen said it was.
"Say, old man, this is Jerkum, the dentist. I accidentally gave your wife too much gas. She's unconscious. Haven't spoken a word for half an hour. What shall I do? What shall I do?"
"Give 'er more gas. Doc!" cried Henpek, gleefully. "I'll be right over."

Babel a la Radio

Like all radio fans they delighted in "fishing" for stations far away and when they succeeded in landing a foreign station, such as Havana, it was a cause for celebration.

One afternoon Mrs. B. rushed next door to tell her neighbor in excited tones that she had some foreign station, but couldn't make out what it was.

The neighbor turned in on the same number and, sure enough, a voice was rattling off a speech in a foreign language. Both waited breathlessly for the announcement at the end of the talk.

It was a service in the German language in a church in Chicago.

Electric Cure for Colds

Colds can be treated by applying electric heat to the inflamed interior of the nose.

Electric current is sent between metal plates at each side of the nose, so that the inner membranes of the nose and not the skin receive most of the heat produced.

Several remarkable successes have been reported after a few minutes of this treatment.
