

Know Your Milk

You wouldn't want milk at any price if you knew it wasn't "safe"—and you wouldn't want "safe" milk put in unclean bottles.

Keeping Qualities

Sour milk is caused by the growth of lactic acid bacteria in the milk. This bacteria growth is not harmful—in fact, it is beneficial and needed but all milk contains sufficient quantities in its sweet state for human development and health.

This bacteria growth takes place most rapidly at warm temperatures but it can be controlled. Freezing temperature stops its growth completely.

arrests the growth of lactic acid and the milk is then kept under refrigeration until it goes on the route to you.

Know your dairy—know your milk. We give the maximum protection and service and no other milk sold in O'Neill will pass Sanitary Dairy qualifications. Phone and place a regular order.

Sanitary Dairy

O'Neill, Nebr.

Phone No. 84

Pasteurization is the only sure way of pure milk. Our dairy provides modern and scientific machinery to pasteurize "thoroughly"—specially arranged equipment permits making each bottle absolutely sterile.

You don't like to think of milk being bottled by human hands if avoidable—and you surely don't want milk handled in unsanitary surroundings.

Our dairy is equipped with an automatic bottler—it is also scrupulously clean. Inspect it.

Choose Sanitary Dairy milk for its purity, its goodness, its protection to public health. It costs no more and in so doing you will also get a milk superior in keeping qualities because we make it so.

The minute Sanitary Dairy milk leaves the bottler, it is immediately chilled to icy coldness. This carriers first suggested itself to Seymour a year ago last spring, when he found a nest of crane eggs while hunting in the sandhills near Swan Lake and took them home and hatched them out under a common hen. The little cranes grew up as pets.

As soon as they were able to fly they would take long journeys daily, always returning, however, at nights and at feeding times. Grasshoppers, their owner soon discovered, were particularly delicious morsels on their bills of fare; and that the birds would travel distances for a feed of the preferred insects, also was learned. Seymour accordingly began carrying grasshoppers in his pockets to feed his cranes, and soon induced them to follow the automobile when he started out on the mail route, for a feed of grasshoppers at the first stop.

From this it was but a short step to providing grasshopper luncheons at fixed hours at the several points along the mail route and the cranes soon began to make the trips alone, and returning home to roost after completion of the outbound journey. The problem of inducing the birds to carry extra weight was a little more difficult to overcome. At first small packages were attached to their legs, but this proved unsatisfactory as the cranes had difficulty in leaving the ground and getting into the air. Then the weights were attached to collars about the birds' necks, which enabled them to get away easily and to fly without overbalancing. Each adult crane loaded in this manner can carry from 12 to 15 pounds. Six cranes will be required to carry the mail each way, each one carrying a pouch for some one of the several postoffices along the route.

Only first-class mail will be carried by the birds, heavier mail and parcel post being transported several times a week by auto truck as at present. Large quantities of grasshoppers were caught, dried and stored at the several postoffices on the mail route last fall to assure successful operation of the crane mail until the new crop of hoppers is ripe this summer.

MRS. WILLIAM MEYER AND BABY BURNED

Mrs. William Meyer and baby were quite severely burned about the chest and head last Monday morning. Mrs. Meyer and baby were alone at their home in the southwestern part of O'Neill; Mrs. Meyer endeavored to stimulate the fire in a small heating stove by throwing some kerosene onto the coals; everything would have been alright if the match she lighted had not gone out before she reached the stove; while she was getting another match considerable gas accumulated in the stove, which exploded when she threw in the lighted match. The baby was near the stove and was burned some on the chest and neck; Mrs. Meyer received her burns when she endeavored to extinguish the flame that surrounded the baby. The burns are not serious and the patients are getting along nicely.

Beaver Flats, Neb.

James Seymour, star route mail carrier between Beaver Flats and Swan Lake, 60 miles southwest of here, will use sandhill cranes for the transportation of the mail over his route beginning this month. Six months of experimentation in the use of cranes as carriers of burdens, by Seymour, has proved the feasibility of the scheme and that two round trips a day may be made without overworking the cranes, as compared to one trip a day with present means of transportation.

FIRST SETTLER

IN HOLT COUNTY

(Inman Leader.)

Mrs. Byron Parker, resides in O'Neill, was one of Holt county's first inhabitants, coming there in 1871 with her parents from Wisconsin. They took a claim south of where Inman now is located. They went back to Wisconsin, formed a small colony of friends, and came back.

Their houses were mostly of logs. The settlers had to travel to Yankton, South Dakota, for most of their materials and supplies. Mrs. Parker was then a girl sixteen years old.

Gen. John O'Neill came a year later, and often used Mrs. Parker's pony in traveling over this territory before establishing his colony and the present town of O'Neill.
