Scarlatti, who is a native of Sicily, only recently arrived in this country from his boyhood home at Palermo where his family is engaged in the rearing of bees, and obtained employ-ment on the railroad. The second day of his employment the section crew and 35c and 10 were engaged in leveling up the track near the Thompson bee ranch when all at once Carlatti, who comes of a line of musical forebears, began to sing as he labored.

He had just concluded one selection and started on another when a swarm of bees from a nearby stand on the ranch moved out of its hive and flying over began to circle about the singer. Then the leader, a buxom Italian queen bee, alighted on his head and began to caress him, while others of the swarm found roosting places on his arms and shoulders and on other members of the section crew to listen to the music.

We owned a flossie limousine, worth eighteen hundred cash; for speed it was a roaring fiend, it rambled like a flash. One day we noted that a gear with Betty Compson, Marceline Day was pounding just a mite; it rattled and James Murray. Lon Chaney when we tried to steer and wobbled gives his most effective performance like a kite. But still it caused us no now as the underworld leader in this alarm, no wrinkles on our brow; a short delay would mean no harm, no use to fix it now. And even when the rattle grew into a healthy pound, we had so many things to do we never got around to tighten up rods and bolts and make it hold the road, because it still took up the jolts with any speed or load. And then one day at eighty flat an earthquake hit our neck; mid twisted rods and wheels we sat, it was an awful wreck. The doctors then spent seven weeks extracting twisted gears and scrap iron from my legs and cheeks, my gizzard, back and ears. The little things we leave undone soon grow to statues great that topple on us by the ton-so don't procrastinate.-Brick Smith.
