PIONEER BUS LINE SERVICE EXTENSION IS GIVEN APPROVAL

An extension of service which the Pioneer Bus Line, owned and operated by Ida N. Bartunek, of O'Neill, desires to make in northern Nebraska has been conditionally approved by the state railway commission.

The line will be permitted to operate between O'Neill and Sioux City, as requested, but with the proviso that no local passengers be carried either way between Randolph and Sioux City. The same restriction as to local service applies between O'Neill and Ainsworth, another route which is otherwise O. K.'d by the commission.

There will be one bus each way daily between O'Neill and Ainsworth and between O'Neill and Sioux City. With connections available at Ainsworth, this will provide through service all the way from Chadron to Sioux City and to Grand Island through O'Neill.

One has direct connections with any point on the way from Grand Island. Everyone should boost for this bus line.

Mr. Thompson was in another part of the barn when the accident happened and Vernon is unable to tell how he was hurt. The supposition is that he was kicked by a mule. Dr. Gill reduced the fracture and latest reports are that he is getting along nicely.

(From last week.)

Herman Rubin met with a painful accident Thursday, July 19. He was driving a team of horses hitched to a farm wagon with a rake tied on behind. In some manner he must have caught his foot and fell when he tried to get out of the wagon to close a gate as he was found by neighbors in a dazed condition with a deep cut on the side of his head that almost severed the left ear. He was brought to Chambers for medical attention. It required twenty stitches to close the wound.

CELIA NEWS.

The Peter Judge hay gang generously turned in and put up the hay for W. O. James. Fine neighbors are always generous, and that's the kind we have.

Two young mules were hauled and delivered by the community truck on Monday to the Stuart stockyards. They were sold to a Kansas City mule skinner by J. V. Johnson and Floyd Johnson.

Fred Gottchalk purchased a threshing machine and is threshing the neighborhood. Rye is a fairly good crop and yields from eight to twelve bushels an acre. We haven't had a report on how many gallons it makes, yet.

Generally, when some neighbors begin to make hay, it commences to rain, but that rub don't seem to hold good this year, not even with practically the whole neighborhood making hay will it rain. Well, the hay will be little, but good.

A barn dance was given by D. F. Scott Friday evening, a week ago. Some fine music was rendered by the Sahpell orchestra, who play the clarinet, accordion and bass drum. A fine lunch was served by these generous people at midnight.

The James and Johnson families took a day off Wednesday and made a trip to the Niobrara river at Whitening bridge, looking over the dam and other things of interest. A picnic dinner was enjoyed in the shade. They returned home by Spencer and Butte, meeting acquaintances at both places and enjoying a few minutes visit with each of them. The young James family left for their home in Omaha the next day.

The Sunday School missionaries, Dillon and Jialgrinson, who are always in a hurry, were detained at the Johnson home Wednesday night, and invited the neighbors in for a group gathering and picnic dinner Sunday, four miles west of O'Neill. They were also looking up some real talent in the line of singers for the group, and requested that James and Johnson, the Celia singers, should be present and sing. They were there, and ate, sang and conquered. There was a splendid picnic dinner, but what deserves mention and commendation in these items was the program rendered by the children of the vacation bible school, and the sermon preached by Evangelist Marks, of Basset. The James' and Johnson's were entertained at the J. K. Ernsts' lovely home after the gathering, a while, and with the talented Miss Marks at the piano, almost raised the roof off of the old homestead shack. The Celia singers have promised to sing at the Marquette church east of Meek, Sunday.
