Horses -- Not of the Past

By ROMAINE SAUNDERS, 4110 South 51st St., Lincoln 6, Nebr.

Carney Clements and Coyne, on a recent visit up there, Prairieland Talker had the pleasure of riding to Chambers, from Chambers west to my former home community in Swan precinct and a stop at the old Riley brothers ranch now operated by a drughter of the last of the Rileys and her husband, Tom Baker, who were not at home that day. Carney, at the steering wheel and familiar with that grass-robed region of Holt county, rolled us along some two miles further west, turned to return to the first road going north, and on up that beautiful Inez valley. We have been led to believe that the horse was a thing of the past, but there on Charley Peterson's stretch of grasslands were grazing 200 horses the day we drove by. And George Meals, at whose hospitality we enjoyed a visit, told me they have 10 horses, one of the ten being a fat old mare I had sold him as a four-year-old some twenty years ago. It was a pleasure to find the Meals family well and prosperous. The country we traweled over, as elsewhere in this prairieland state, looked good, well watered by frequent rains and robed in velvet green. Though he is of pioneer Holt county blood it may have been Mr. Coyne's first visit down that way, but he enjoyed it as we all did. Horses a thing of the past? Not yet!

When the tomatoes turn red I may get up to the O'Neill community. Met a friend there on a recent visit to O'Neill, Mr. Shultz, formerly in the grocery business but now a nurseryman, who told me he had sold 27,000 tomato plants. Maybe housewives around O'-Neill are going into the canning

The administrative head of the Agricultural College of Peoria, Ill., invited the Agricultural Committee of our state legislature to visit the college. Our group of state senators making up that committee were flown

Bright summer days again come and go, stately trees adorned in velvet leaf, grass and flowers and birds, growing grainfields and gardens of fruits and spuds and lots of pleasant things we Yankees love to eat. Sunshine and rain and all across our great prairieland is the land of plenty, adorned in floral beauty, herds of cattle, pigs and poultry. So we may entertain a heart to gratitude for the bounties and ted two hearts to beat as one

The Federals and Redbird

zens of the little community of Redbird, you might get some idea of how it feels to lose your post office.

It seems strange, the millions of dollars the federal government spends, the increase in postage rates, and a promise of more increases of postage rates, that the little community would have one of its last institutions closed.

Federal authorities said they closed it because it was fourth class which means, simply that the little office did less business than the third, second or first class office.

It means little else but a few figures being totaled in a book in Kansas City to this super and giant of a federal government we have.

But to the folks down Redbird way, the office was more than just a place where you went to get your mail. The people there looked forward to getting their mail more, perhaps, because they could talk to their neighbors in their own community rather than the fact that this is where they received

Sure, the same people will go to Lynch. Sure, they will meet each other there too. But something will be missing. They will tell you that there is a certain feeling about meeting friends in your own community is now missing.

Support Your Team From Rock County Leader

Summertime is here with its associated activities. Among them is baseball.

Bassett will have several teams is action this season, and all are worthy of the community's support. They should be supported with attendance first of all, for playing to empty stands is not the most inspiring situation in the world. Attendance also helps out with the financial end of the game. It is likely that additional financial support will be needed. We hope the citizens of Bassett and Rock county will be generous in their support. The town team players, for instance, pay their own expenses. All they ask is enough funds to purchase equipment and pay for lighting the local field. The Legion Juniors are sponsored by the Bassett

American Legion post, and are also worthy of attendance and financial support. Baseball is a sport that is truly American and is sometimes called the national pastime.

The Rinky-Dink program will continue through the summer. Walt Parr has done a tremendous job with the small fry, and the enthusiasm with which the players participate is something to see. While we are on the subject of baseball and Walt Parr we would like to say that the recent baseball tryout camp held here was possible largely through Walt's efforts. He made the initial contact with Tom Demark, and set the event up.

Borrowed Reputation From Pierce County Leader

It may be a church, or perhaps a civic organiration or a 4-El club. If someone came along and asked you, "Can we rent your reputation?" what would your answer be?
