WHEN YOU SHOULD STOP ADVERTISING

Being just a few suggestions to the man who feels he needs no sales help;

When man becomes so perfectly a creature of habit that he will certainly buy this year exactly what . . . and exactly where . . . he bought last year . . .

When spunkier firms than yours stop taking away "your customers" through good advertising . . .

When population ceases to increase and when new folks are no longer attracted to O'Neill . . .

When you have thoroughly convinced everyone in your entire trade area that you give better buys and better service . . .

When business principles reverse themselves and the non-advertiser does as much business as the consistent advertiser . . .

When your competitors stop making huge strides ahead through planned advertising . . .

When you are so successful that you can ignore the advice of wise merchants the world over who know that advertising pays and pays . . .

When you would rather have your own way even if you fail, than follow friendly advice and win . . .

When you're tired of making money and don't want to be bothered with customers . . .

That'll be the time to stop advertising.

Until then, the surest way to stay in business profitably is to advertise regularly in your best home town advertising medium . . .
