The wind-driven snow rolls on and so do the days on our 1960 calendar, with this month of January (usually considered the longest of the year) over half gone, and with it the thought that the warmer days aren't too far away.

Many announcements of school closings on the radio January 18 morning, but Miss Burival, teacher in district 33, braved the stormy weather to drive the 17 or 18 miles from her home. However, the road to the highway was drifted shut by mid-afternoon and she spent the night with one of her patrons, the Sam Derickson family.
